MISS EARHART says women will play a great part in flying. Of course they will. Women are braver than men, and a woman's hand can steer a plane as well as a man's.

Women will win especial distinction in four directions, flying, astronomy, singing, acting.

But woman's greatest work for all time, work in which SHE does everything, is MOTHERHOOD.

THE ceiling of the Sistine Chapel was painted by the woman that produced Michelangelo. The World War was ended by two women that produced Clemenceau and Lloyd George, and the Union was saved by Nancy Hanks when she produced Abraham Lincoln.

WOMAN ought to realize that she literally does everything and be satisfied. She should pick out the best available husband, paying especial attention to kindness. That quality is important when slim waist, light feet and well waxed mustache lose their charm.

SENATOR ROBINSON, Gov. Smith's running mate, is delighted with Mr. Raskob, General Motors finance chairman, for Democratic national chairman. Senator Robinson believes that Mr. Raskob will "match Hoover organization genius."

THE question for Republicans is, "Where will they find a man to match Raskob?" He is a great organizer, great financier and, as head of General Motors finance, he has proved himself a "golden goose," able to produce golden eggs on a quantity basis. That's important in a campaign.

THE Doukhobors, strange sect, transplanted from Russia, have a queer way of protesting against injustice.

They propose now, men and women, to parade, stark naked, through the streets of Nelson, British Columbia.

They call themselves "Sons of Freedom," go around with no clothes on. Parading stark naked, in their opinion, proves freedom.

WE KNOW that it proves foolishness, that it has taken men thousands of years to clothe themselves properly, and that even yet women haven't quite made up their minds what they want to wear, changing frequently from too much to too little.

OF SEVEN men electrocuted in a Kentucky prison after midnight yesterday morning, the three Negroes apparently showed more courage than the four white men. One man, Hastew Dockery, who was to have died first, had been very indifferent and cynical. But when the hour came he asked for delay, saying he wanted to become a Catholic. A priest was sent for, and he was received into the church. The four white men all shivered, although it was a hot night.

ONE Negro, James Howard, of Louisville, entered the death room singing "Lily of the Valley." As they put him in the death chair he waved his hand, saying to the witnesses: "Gentlemen, how are you feeling tonight?"

CLARENCE M'QUEEN, colored, also sang a song in the death chair and was much interested in the proceedings.

What IS courage? Is it sometimes absence of feeling that makes it possible to commit a murder and to sing in the electric chair?

YOUNG ladies that "don't seem to get any proposals" will marvel on hearing that our Peggy Joyce is about to be married again.

This will be her fifth husband and her second nobleman. Once Miss Joyce was the Countess Gosta Moerner, but she gave that up. The commoners had "good money." Happy No. 5, if everything goes smoothly, will be Lord Northesk, whose wife, formerly Miss Jessica Brown, is now divorcing him.

"HOW does she do it?" young ladies ask. How did Helen of Troy do it, or Cleopatra?

Miss Joyce, it is said, has a certain dash and swing in a night club that electrifies the atmosphere. There are many "live ones" in night clubs.

FEDERAL Reserve authorities, explaining that they wish to discourage speculation, put up the discount rate.

Little gamblers are discouraged for a while, the weakest are shaken out, then the speculation goes on.

MEANWHILE the rate is up, price of "call money" eaches 8 per cent, and business men, borrowing at the bank on good collateral, are told that the bank is very sorry, but it is necessary to charge 8 per cent instead of 4½ or 5 per cent, "because rates are higher."

Very nice for those that lend money, not so nice for business men.

A MAN in Massachusetts put a Hoover plate on the front of his automobile and a Smith plate at the rear. He is for Hoover: his wife is for Smith. The husband is happy because he has Hoover in front. The wife is satisfied because she says "Smith's name is the last thing they will see."

JUNE CARROLL

June Carroll, for several seasons in the Zeigfeld Follies, will soon glorify the Grand Opera platform. She is one of two American-born girls who have just been admitted to the Metropolitan Opera Company and stage and operatic circles buzz over June's youth. She first attracted attention in the "Vagabond King" and her success in that opus lead to her engagement by Metropolitan.

Flier Dies In Storm

Mexican Ace Killed as Plane Crashes in Jersey Wilds.

International News Service.

CHATSWORTH, N. J., July 14.—Cold in death, the broken body of Capt. Emilio Carranza left the undertaking parlor in Mount Holly for New York at 6:20 this morning for shipment to his stricken widow in Mexico City, while grief over the tragic end of the gallant young flier cast a pall over the peoples of two nations.

Meanwhile U. S. army officers and New Jersey police endeavored to ascertain the cause of the crash of his plane, a sister ship to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's historic Spirit of St. Louis, in a wilderness of woods and berry bogs eight miles from here on Thursday night shortly after he had hopped off from Roosevelt Field, L. I., on an attempted non-stop flight to Mexico City.

DOUBT LIGHTNING THEORY

When the crushed body of the Mexican Lindbergh, and his wrecked Ryan cabin monoplane, the Mexico Excelsior, were found by berry pickers late yeasterday, police expressed the belief that the plane had been struck by a lightning bolt during the severe electrical storm which raged over this vicinity Thursday night. The good-will flier's charred leather jacket and evidence on one wing of the plane appeared to support this theory.

Lieut. F. W. Bullock, U. S. A., however, reported after an investigation last night that Carranza apparently had attempted to land to escape the storm and had crashed when his path was blocked by trees. He pointed out that the throttle of the engine had been closed and the spark advanced, and that the luckless aviator apparently had been trying to locate a safe landing place with the aid of a flashlight to which his fingers clung even in death.

In further support of this theory was the testimony of residents of Trenton that a plane had dropped a landing flare at Mercer Airport, Trenton at about 8 o'clock Thursday evening. The crash occurred shortly after 8 o'clock, it is believed. The plane over the airport, after circling around a few times, flew Officials Pleaded With Pilot to Wait Clear Weather.

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP.)—Henry B. Clark, manager of Roosevelt Field, said today that Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexican ace, had ignored expert advice when he took off in the face of Thursday night's bad weather for his return flight to Mexico City.

"My ground crews were available to him at all times and their expert advice was placed at his disposal," Lieut. Clark said, "but he ignored their advice."

Officers at the Long Island flying fields were shocked when they learned that the Mexican Good-Will flier had been killed when his plane crashed near Mt. Holly, N. J.

OFFICIALS IGNORED

Lieut. Clark said that on each of Carranza's attempts to take off officials at the field were not notified to put out ground crews.

"When he did go there was no one in authority at the field and no one in authority knew of his intention to leave," Clark said.

"On the day he took off I pleaded with him personally not to go, telling him the weather was bad and that it would be a miracle if he got off the runway at all as there was a strong south wind blowing across the runway and thunderstorms were approaching from the west.

"If he would wait until the weather cleared, I said, he would have a west wind that would be of material assistance at the start.

"Due to the fact that his was a government flight, considerable diplomacy had to be exercised and we at the field did our best. Had it been a commercial flight we never would have permitted the runway to be used on the night Capt. Carranza took off."

He said the Mexican flier had been given the courtesy of the field and was not even charged the customary fee for the use of the runway.

Mechanics at Roosevelt Field who had stood by while Capt. Carranza made several unsuccessful attempts to get away before last night believed those efforts had strained his ship.

FLOODS HIT COUNTY, TRAFFIC TIED

Property damage in all parts of the county was being reported today as a result of the heavy downpour of rain all yesterday. Small streams emptying into the three rivers were turned into raging torrents overflowing their banks and backing up over roads and railroad and street car tracks.

Sweeping into Millvale from the West View and Ross township districts the water from the cloudburst caused Girty's run to quickly grow from a peaceful creek into a muddy swirling river. The whole business section of Millvale felt the effect of the flood. The first floors and cellars of many establishments were flooded with the dirty yellow water which left behind it a heavy layer of silt and tons of debris. Damage estimated at several thousand dollars was done to a business block under construction at North and Lincoln avenues.

ETNA FLOODED

In Etna, Pine Creek got beyond its banks and flooded the cellars of 150 homes and did other damage.

The striking miners' barracks at Horning were surrounded and for a time isolated by the flood waters there. Gardens planted by the idle miners to stretch their meager food

Grimes to Tackle Braves

The National League's "other" contender for last place will heckle our Pirates for the next few days. As the lowly Phils folded their soaking-wet tents and moved out, the docile Braves silently stole into the city. The Tribe and Buccos will stage the first fight of a four-game setto this afternoon.

Burleigh Grimes, the hurler with the best mark for total innings pitched in the major leagues, will step into his favorite character in the opener with the Braves. Grimes thrives on regular work so Manager Bush decided it would be better to have him, in view of the fact that the spitball star is the only consistent winner on the squad.

SMITH AGAIN GAINS IN STRAW VOTE POLL

Smith continued to romp along with the votes in The Sun-Telegraph's straw ballot yesterday, gathering 524 votes to Hoover's 366. In two of the districts, Hoover led his opponent, Wilkinsburg running three-to-one against Smith and the P. & L. E. Railroad station vote running six-to-five for Hoover.

The City-County Building polled the heaviest vote yesterday, more than 300, officials and others in the building giving Smith a strong lead. In the Grand Arcade more than 200 persons voted, heavily favoring Smith.

VOTE ON LINKS

Today a voting machine is installed at the Schenley Park golf course, where Pittsburgh flocks on Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and a heavy vote is expected from this district. This will offer something novel for the golfers, and give them something to think about besides keeping their eye on the ball while stroking around the course. Those who vote in The Sun-Telegraph's straw vote before starting their game will have a feeling of satisfaction, and those who play first will hurry around in 70 or 118 to get back and register their preference between Smith and Hoover.

Results recorded by the machines yesterday follow:

WILLING TO GIVE UP UNION LEAGUE

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—The turmoil created among the members of the Union League Club of Philadelphia, a staid old organization whose members are the mainstay of Pennsylvania's Republicanism, was somewhat relieved today by the announcement that John J. Raskob, a member for the past 10 years, who has gone over to the Democratic ranks, would resign from the club.

"I do not wish to embarrass the Union League and I shall be very glad to resign," Raskob said.

"When I became a member I let it be known I voted for President Wilson," he said at his home in Centerville, Md. "I have never officially been affiliated with the Republican or Democratic parties. I have always been independent in politics. Now, however, I see an opportunity of performing some constructive service by helping relieve the country of the damnable affliction of prohibition. I accepted the chance Gov. Al Smith offered me to help him."

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, July 14.—(AP.)—With 10 men snatched from death in the Arctic, rescue planes and the Russian icebreaker Krassin were intent today on reaching a spot some 30 miles to the east of Foyn Island.

There it was believed that six men who drifted away in the balloon part of the Italia after the fatal crash on May 25 and possibly Roald Amundsen and his five companions on a French rescue seaplane might be found.

The latest to be rescued, Capt. Sora, of the Italian Alpine chasseurs, and the Dutch engineer Van Dongen, who had attempted to make a perilous march over the ice to search for Italia castaways, were safe aboard the base ship Citta Di Milano today. They were picked off Foyn Island by a Finnish airplane and brought to Kings Bay.

Dependence was placed on the Soviet flyer Chukhnovsky for locating the exact position of the men east of Foyn Island, since his keen eyes had spotted the Italians, Captains Filippo Zappi and Alberto Mariano and directed the Krassin to their rescue from an iceberg. The airman and four companions were forced down on the ice near Cape Platen, damaging their plane. They succeeded in reaching land, established a base and busied them-

"Air Inspectors" Start Home Today

100 PITTSBURGHERS IN NEW YORK

The 100 Pittsburghers on the "Pittsburgh Aviation Special" leave the East tonight to come home to lay plans for making this area a leader in aviation and airplane constructon. Here is the group as it appeared in New York during a pause in the inspection of airports in that district.

SUNDAY NOVEL PRAISED

Announcement that The Sun-Telegraph will publish a complete novel every Sunday, beginning with Edna Ferber's "Show Boat" tomorrow, brought numerous expressions of commendation from prominent men and women of Pittsburgh. The undertaking was praised as promoting love for good literature, and as a means of bringing into many homes high-class fiction that could not be obtained otherwise. Apropos of this last, it was mentioned by Ralph Munn, director of the Carnegie Library, that that institution had been wholly unable to meet the demand for "Show Boat."

"Show Boat" is regarded by professors of English literature and booksellers as one of the most notable literary works of the age, as the following statements set forth:

Leo T. Lawler, Professor of English Literature, Carnegie Institute of Technology—I think The Sun-Telegraph's plan to give its readers good novels with its Sunday editions an excellent one. I consider it a suitable service, and Miss Ferber's work as an appropriate one with which to begin the series.

Professor Percival Hunt, head of the Department of English, University of Pittsburgh—If The Sun-Telegraph maintains the same level in its fiction that it has attained in arranging to publish Edna Ferber's "Show Boat," it will be rendering a real service to the community. I am very glad to see this being done.

MINERS DEADLOCKED ON NEW POLICY

Mexico Plunged Into Grief Over Carranza's Death

Bank Teller -:- The "Man Without A Country" Lives -:- Loses To Law

FOREIGN LEGION

The plight of Edward Everett Hale's "Man Without a Country" must have been forcibly brought home to George Anderson, former Chicago bank teller, whenever he saw the flag of his native land while he was a member of the French Foreign Legion. He had fled America after embezzling bank funds and joined the legion to go anywhere—anywhere except the United States—after losing his ill-gotten money at Monte Carlo.

GEORGE ANDERSON

George Anderson, former Chicago bank teller, who fled the country to escape the penalty for his theft of the bank's funds.

HOME-SICK

Like the original "man without a country," Anderson soon began to long for the United States. He deserted the Foreign Legion and beat his way back to Chicago, where he was arrested. Above he confers with Attorney E. J. Hess (right).

LAW WINS

Despite his rapid change from a neat and respected young man to a ragged outcast, Anderson was recognized by a policeman who saw him slink into a basement. It was there he was found, slouched in a corner, and arrested.

MEXICAN ACE KILLED

away when the pilot apparently decided not to land.

Carranza apparently jumped from the falling plane, but did not have time enough to open his parachute, police said.

The body was to be taken today to New York, where Arturo M. Elias, Mexican consul general, was making arrangements to send the remains to the Carranza family in Mexico City.

Carranza was only 22, and was married but recently. He was a grand-nephew of the late President Carranza of Mexico, and was that country's premier aviator.

KILLED IN WILDERNESS

The spot where the silver-colored plane and the body were found is in a wilderness. It is about a mile and a half west of the Central Railroad tracks and more than 23 miles from the main automobile road at Mount Holly.

Three huckelberry pickers, John Henry Carr, 30; his wife, Marie, 24, and his mother, Mrs. May Carr, 52, all of Chatsworth, came upon the body simultaneously. They were too frightened to examine it or the wrecked plane, but instead hurried back to Chatsworth and notified county police.

"I nearly stepped on an aviator," Carr mumbled. "His plane is up in a tree!"

Police found that a large piece of the plane's wing had been torn off by the top of a tree, and was hanging from that tree, about half a mile from where the body was found. The left wing also had been torn off, apparently by a tree, and had fallen to the ground, near the body.

The fuselage was half buried in the soft earth of a clearing about 10 feet square, the propeller having been shattered by the base of still another tree.

The body was about 60 feet away. The face was badly battered and the body was otherwise mutilated; the leather jacket and the khaki colored trousers were slightly charred.

IDENTIFIED BY TELEGRAM

Identification was made by a telegram found in one of the pockets of the jacket. The telegram had been sent to Carranza by the United States Weather Bureau at Washington. It started "Cloudy—fly high," and continued with a detailed report of weather conditions between Roosevelt Field and Mexico City by way of New Orleans and Galveston, Tex.—the route Carranza had planned to take. Two unused tickets for a boxing bout at Madison Square Garden were found in another pocket of the jacket.

Parts of the battered wings were charred, the detectives said, although apparently the plane itself had not actually taken fire.

Limbs and tops of trees were broken off for a distance of about a quarter of a mile from where the body was found.

Police said it was apparent from the wreckage and the position and conditon of the body that the plane had been struck by lightning, that the pilot had struggled to keep the machine aloft at least until he could find a place to make a forced landing, that a tree top had ripped off most of the right wing, and that Carranza had soon afterwards jumped. The plane then, apparently, crashed through another tree, which ripped off the remaining wing, and then dove into the underbrush in the small clearing.

This place is in the heart of the Jersey pines, all the land for many miles around being thickly wooded. Natives said that if the Carrs hadn't happened to stumble upon the body it might have remained there undiscovered until the deer hunting season in the fall, since the berry picking season is almost over now.

Capt. Carranza had planned to return to Mexico City in one hop. He had made several false starts at Roosevelt Field, and finally, convinced that he had too much gasoline aboard, dumped more than 30 gallons. He still had abo [illegible] gallons of gasoline when he did take off at 7:05 p. m. Thursday.

Carranza's face was badly mutilated and covered with mud. The right side of the skull was crushed in, and the left arm, right hand and both legs, were broken. An electric flashlight was gripped in the right hand. This had been driven up into the hand, breaking some bones.

Carranza's wrist watch, apparently torn off, with the strap broken, was found about 10 feet from the body.

One hundred and seventy-five dollars in bank notes were found in one of the trousers pockets. They were new bills, and the force of the fall had cracked—not ripped—some of these on the inside of the roll.

No word had been heard of him since the take-off at Roosevelt Field. He lay dead in the Berry bog, while inquiries as to his whereabouts burned up telegraph wires across the country.

MEXICO MOURNS OVER CARRANZA

MEXICO CITY, July 14.—(AP.)—Mexico mourned today the tragic end of Capt. Emilio Carranza, good-will flier who crashed in New Jersey.

Secretary of War Amaro telegraphed all military commandants throughout the country ordering the army to observe eight days of mourning for the flier. He stated that "the government believes that it is its duty to pay homage to that member of the army who gave up his life to conquer glory for his country."

Plans were under way to give Carranza a national funeral and to bury the airman with highest military honors in "the place of the illustrious dead," reserved in one of the cemeteries of the capital as a last resting place for national heroes.

FAMILY STRICKEN

Grief was deep at the Carranza home. The flier's mother and wife were waiting there for news of his arrival at Valbuena Field from New York. They were chatting quietly when a man dashed in from the street, shouting:

"Emilio is dead."

The widow and mother were thrown into hysterics. A sister who had been ill arose from her bed and maintained her composure while she tried to quiet the two other women.

The Mexican people feel the tragedy with a peculiar poignancy because of the fervor with which they had anticipated a place of distinction in the world of aviation. Despite the brilliancy of Carranza's flight to Washington, his forced landing at Mooresville was a sore wound to national pride. They regarded his New York-to-Mexico City attempt as a brave gesture to vindicate Mexican honor.

Mexicans are saying that the failure of Mexico to have to its credit flights such as some other nations have is wiped out by Carranza's demonstration that a Mexican airman knows how to soar out to death as calmly as the aviators of every other land. The expression heard most on the streets of the Capital was:

"Carranza braved the storms for the sake of Mexico's good name."

TUNNEL FLOOD TRAPS 3

MINERS IN DEADLOCK

International News Service.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 14.—After three full days spent in conference over the newly proposed policy of conducting the national bituminous coal strike, the policy committee of the United Mine Workers of America were still deadlocked today.

They were to resume deliberations this morning. It was freely predicted that a decision would be reached before adjournment of today's session.

International President John L. Lewis maintained his characteristic silence as to what went on in the conference chamber, barred to all save union leaders and members of the committee.

Lewis received prolonged applause at the close of yesterday's session, but this did not mean, it was pointed out, that the entire committee is in agreement with alll of his views.

The meeting of the policy committee, now dragging into its fourth day, was called at the request of Illinois miners who are seeking freedom of action in negotiating with operators to end their strike on the best terms possible.

The present union policy requires all negotiations to be on the basis of "no reduction in wages."

served list, and we have been wholly unable to supply the demand for it. It is an excellent novel, portraying an important period of American life. It shows the river life better than any other novel I know of. I commend The Sun-Telegraph for publishing it as a Sunday supplement. If The Sun-Telegraph keeps up the standard set in its first venture it will be doing a fine thing for Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, Director of Public Welfare — I consider the publication of Edna Ferber's "Show Boat" by The Sun-Telegraph an outstanding contribution to the cultural life of the city. It is a very laudable undertaking. I am impressed by its altruistic aspect. In putting high-grade literature in the homes of Pittsburgh, The Sun-Telegraph is promoting education. It is giving good books to those who would not read them otherwise.

Mrs. Carl E. Cosolowsky, President of the Congress of Women's Clubs of Western Pennsylvania—In the department of literature of the congress we review only the best books. We regard Edna Ferber very favorably. We feel that in publishing fiction of this character, The Sun-Telegraph is co-operating with us in our effort to inculcate in the public a taste for good literature.

Miss Helen Grimes, member Legislature — I can recommend "Show Boat." I have already read it and enjoyed it very much. It sets forth a phase of American life that has not received much attention in our literature. The Sun-Telegraph deserves praise for publishing stories of this character.

J. J. Estabrook, manager of the Book Department of the Joseph Horne Company—"Show Boat" is a very unusual story. It has an unusual plot and unusual character development and is splendidly written. It is one of the outstanding novels of the age, and has had a tremendous sale. We have sold many hundreds of copies at $2.

William McGhee, head of the Book Department of Kaufmann's Store — Our sales of "Show Boat" have been very large and offer conclusive proof of its popularity. In "Show Boat," Edna Ferber has written a story that is worth reading. It should be of interest to every American, and to the people of other countries as well. The Sun-Telegraph deserves praise for its enterprise in presenting this fine novel to its readers.

A. K. Betteridge, manager of the Book Department of Boggs & Buhl's — The Sun-Telegraph deserves credit for its plan to publish Miss Edna Ferber's novel, "Show Boat," and other fiction of the same fine quality. "Show Boat" has become internationally famous. I saw the play in Europe. The book has been in strong demand in our store, and we have sold a vast number of copies.

T. Edward Jones, proprietor of the Jones Book Shop — "Show Boat" is one of the most popular novels that we have handled. The demand for it in our circulating library was extraordinary. The reason for its popularity is not far to seek. It is a fascinating story of high literary quality, written by one of our most skillful writers. The Sun-Telegraph, in publishing it, is giving its readers a rare treat.

W. J. Crull, manager of the Priscilla Guthrie Book Shop — "Show Boat" has been one of our best sellers. Sun-Telegraph readers will undoubtedly enjoy it. In issuing novels of this character as supplements to its Sunday editions, "The Sun-Telegraph will be giving entertainment of a high order of merit to its subscribers and at the same time teaching appreciation of good literature.

WORKMEN CAUGHT

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—Three men were trapped—possibly drowned—early today when tons of water raced through two sewage tunnels in which a gang of 25 men were working.

The men had been sent there to clean and re-cement the walls.

A new shift had gone down at midnight and the foreman ordered that a small quantity of water be let into the tunnels by raising gates at the pumping station. There was a misunderstanding, and too much water was loosed.

The workmen fled for their lives, most of them escaping by ladders extending down from manholes 100 feet apart. Three men, two of whom were Negroes, were missing when a check was made shortly afterward, and they are believed to have drowned.

There was a stand of seven feet of water in the tunnel when firemen later began pumping it out.

Carl Cherio was one of those missing. He escaped during the first rush of water, but returned later to rescue others. He carried out seven men. He went down on the eighth trip and was not seen again.

selves in repairing the broken landing gear of their craft. From this point it was expected that they would make frequent scouting flights and again summon the Krassin to the rescue.

Italian planes also will join in the searching work over the ice of Queen Victoria Sea in the neighborhood of 80 degrees, 45 minutes north and 30 degrees 31 minutes west, it is known that Roald Amundsen held the view that the balloon party of the Italia would be found in this location and the hope is held that he and his companions may have reached this point and become marooned with them. Dr. Fridjof Nansen, Norwegian explorer, has always thought that the missing Italians would be found there and the Soviet rescue commission holds a similar view.

The Norwegian icebreaker Braganza was making its way today toward the camp of a marooned rescuer—Varming, a Dane. He had started out with Capt. Sora, but fell sick and was left at Cape Brun with a dog team and provisions.

rations were swept away or badly damaged.

The storm left Fifth avenue at Brady street covered with tons of mud and debris. The mud clogged up sewers and covered car tracks, blocking the traffic in the thoroughfare for more than an hour. Carson street and Becks Run road also were under water, Becks Run rising over its banks and covering the River road as well as Becks Run road for several hundred yards. Part of the hillside along the street was washed into the creek, daming the water.

Wabash avenue, West End, also was blocked for several hours by an overflow of Saw Mill Run. Carnegie and Crafton street cars were held up and considerably delayed before they could be rerouted through Sheraden.

Eight large oak trees and a plot of ground 200 feet square skidded into a cut in the National Amusement Company Park, near Aspinwall yesterday. The trees remained upright and apparently none the worse for their ride. The slide carried with it hundreds of tons of rain-soaked earth.

A lake big enough and deep enough for swimming and which was used for exactly that purpose was created yesterday in Beverly road, between McFarlane road and Parker drive, Mt. Lebanon. Passengers on a Mt. Lebanon bus, which was forced to detour by the flood which followed the cloudburst, witnessed several workmen swim through the deepest part of the water.

GANG GUNS RIDDLE UNION AGENT

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.) Another notch was carved in assassins' guns last night when two men in an automobile shot and killed Joseph Faul, 33, a business agent of the plumbers' union.

Faul, lounging in a motor car parked in front of his home, was sprayed with slugs from automatic pistols. He was struck four times in the head and five times in the body.

Frank Faul, a brother of the gun victim and a witness of the shooting, drove the wounded man to a hospital, where he died.

BROTHER QUESTIONED

The brother, held for questioning, denied that Faul had any connection with underworld feuds. Police pursued a theory that a row attributable to a recent union election may have prompted the slaying. Two weeks ago Faul was elected a delegate to the national convention of plumbers to be held in the fall.

Faul was married and the father of two children. His brother was unable to provide a description of the gunmen, who remained concealed in the dark interior of the death machine.

PATRONAGE IN SOUTH UNDER FIRE

BILOXI, Miss., July 14.—(AP.) — Sensational developments with the probable arrest of three persons indicted by the special Federal grand jury investigating distribution of patronage in Mississippi were expected today.

The indictments came as a surprise late yesterday in a partial report of the jury which resumed sessions today after examining a handfull of the 200 witnesses, including men and women postmasters, political leaders and bankers summoned to testify about rumors of "bartering" postoffice jobs.

Another development in connection with the investigation was the arrest of Alfred F. Cook, former postmaster at Leaksville, Miss., who was charged with false postal entries during his tenure in office. He was arrested while here as a witness and was jailed in default of bond.

The names of those against whom indictments were returned were withheld.

Following testimony of officials of the State Guaranty Bank of Magee, who carried before the grand jury bonk records of the affairs of A. P. Russell, U. S. marshal for the Southern District, an additional writ was issued summoning J. T. Thomas, Grenada (Miss.) banker.

PLANE BURNS IN CRASH TO STREET; 3 KILLED

PALACIOS, Tex., July 14.—(AP.)—A commercial pilot and two passengers were killed here yesterday when their airplane crashed in a street and burned.

Earl Prosser, Texas City, Tex., the pilot, was testing his plane preparatory to starting an aerial passenger business at a National Guard camp near here. His passengers, Max Weinberg, Boston, Mass., and Ralph Breen, Galveston, Tex., were taking their first airplane ride.

While circling over the city the plane apparently developed motor trouble and started to glide toward a vacant lot. The pilot lost control at a height of about 200 feet. The ship plunged to the street, where it burned before the bodies could be recovered.

Weinberg and Breen, who planned to operate a concession at the National Guard camp, each leaves a widow and one child. Prosser was not married.

WABASH, Ind., July 14.—Charles Wenrick, 35, pilot employed by an aviation company recently formed here, and Lloyd Kesiter, 30, an automobile salesman, of North Manchester, were instantly killed late yesterday when Wenrick's monocoupe crashed from a height of about 1,000 feet. What caused the accident was not determined. The plane had just left the local airport when it went into a nose dive.

Widow Killed by Train

A widow's life was snuffed out shortly before noon today when she stepped into the path of a passenger train of the Pennsylvania Railroad within a few hundred yards of the Duquesne station.

Mrs. Mary Carash, 65, of 55 Mill street, Duquesne, apparently trying a short cut, walked across the tracks as a through train sped on. The locomotive swept her aside and she died immediately, her skull fractured.

Mrs. Carash lived with a married daughter in Duquesne.

ACID THROWER HUNTED

Hoover Starts on Campaign Trip

ORGANIZES WOMEN

MRS. ALVIN T. HERT

To Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Louisville, Ky., vice chairman of the Republican national party organization, has fallen the task of organizing women voters for Herbert Hoover. She did it in 1924 for President Coolidge.

Will Visit Coolidge, Dawes

WASHINGTON, July 14. — (AP.)—Secretary Hoover will leave Washington tonight for his home at Palo Alto, Cal., where, on August 11, he will be formally apprised of his nomination for the presidency and deliver his address of acceptance.

A large corps of stenographers, reporters and cameramen will accompany the candidate on his westward trip and he will have as his guest Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the Republican leader of the House and, as head of the Eastern speakers bureau, a prominent figure in his campaign.

TO SEE DAWES

Arriving in Chicago tomorrow afternoon a layover of four hours will be spent with Vice President Dawes at his home in Evanston, a visit regarded by political observers here as evidence of vanishing pre-convention differences.

From the Illinois metropolis, the party will go directly to the Summer White House on the Brule River in Wisconsin. Two days will be spent with the President, and Mr. Hoover, who is an enthusiastic and inveterate angler, may give Mr. Coolidge some competition in landing Brule trout.

FRISCO RECEPTION

The itinerary calls for the candidate's arrival in San Francisco at noon on Friday. A reception and celebration are being planned in the Pacific Coast city and with this concluded, Mr. Hoover will motor to his home at Palo Alto.

In the three weeks between his notification and the time he reaches home, the nominee will have an opportunity to finish the preparation of his speech accepting the nomination, in which he was promised a free discussion of campaign issues.

Note Tells Tragedy Of Air

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, July 14. — (AP.)—What may be the last message of Capt. Saint-Roman, the French aviator who disappeared May 6, 1927, when within 200 miles of the coast of Brazil, on a hop from St. Louis, Senegal, has been found in a wine bottle picked up from the sea by a fisherman of the town of Prado, state of Bahia.

The note, written in French and English, says:

> "People of the world, Paris and Latin-America: Fell three hundred miles from Brazil. Am at sea, hungry and thirsty, on a solitary unknown rock. Civilized people, rescue me."

The note was signed "Saint-Roman."

Capt. Saint-Roman and a flying companion left the African coast on May 5, 1927, for a flight to South America. A report of their having been seen within 200 miles of the Brazilian coast was never confirmed, and extended search failed to reveal trace of them. On July 16, the wreckage of an airplane was found by a fisherman in the Amazon estuary and taken to Para. There an engineer identified it as a Goliath machine, the same type as that flown by Saint-Roman. The engineer said, however, that the plane must have made a fair landing, as the wheels showed no damage.

U. S. AGENTS PAY CASH FOR TIPS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 14.—(AP.)—A way for citizens of Southern California to make money, and a new threat to the bootlegger, has been announced by Federal prohibition agents here.

Hereafter all citizens may become members of the prohibition director's staff. If any one has information concerning the operations of an illicit liquor trafficker, he may present it to the enforcement chief and receive recompense ranging from $5 to $500, according to the importance of the information.

The new scheme under which regularly employed "informers" would be done away with was announced by W. W. Anderson, assistant to Prohibition Director Frank R. McReynolds, now in Washington.

Marion Davies Takes Vacation, To Visit New York and Europe; Lois Moran Gets Role In "Fog"

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD isn't quite the same now. It seems a little sadder and less beautiful—because Marion Davies has gone to New York. After giving the big town a break, she will embark for a vacation across the pond. Marion is one of the most gracious and "regular" of all the players. She has oodles of friends and—as far as I've been able to find out—not a single enemy. Which is saying a lot in a community where the green-eyed monster stalks about seeking what it may devour.

Marion will be abroad several weeks before returning home and to the Metro lot to begin work on the ambitious schedule which has been planned for her autumn film activities. Bon Voyage, Marion, and drop us a postcard.

Lois Moran, grown to be a real big girl since the "Stella Dallas" days, has been chosen from among the various Fox charmers to play the leading role in "Fog." Lois is at present engaged in "Making the Grade," with Eddie Lowe's assistance. As soon as that film is finished, she steps into the "Fog," with George O'Brien by her side. I understand the director will be Charles Klein, who created a bit of a stir with his direction of a screen version of Edgar Allen Poes story, "The Tell-Tale Hen." Klein acted as secretary to Ludwig Berger, the German director, and in this association added materially to his store of film knowledge.

Douglas Fairbanks is credited with a Scotch wise-crack regarding Mary Pickford's newly bobbed hair. It is a very long bob—scarcely deserving of the name—and because Mary was unwilling to part with any more of her curly locks than absolutely necessary, Doug refers to the cut as a "Scotch bob." By the way, they plan to move the beautiful Fairbanks' home, "Pickfair," and build a larger house on its present site. It seems a little too bad, for "Pickfair" is one of the few homes that look the part. Most of them are terribly new—and "it takes a lot of livin' in a house to make it home!"

Speaking of houses and homes, I took a little ramble around Harold Lloyd's wee place today. He has the loveliest back-yard. It is 17 acres, beautifully landscaped, completely provided with a sprinkler system, ornamented with canoe courses and lakes and waterfalls, a paradise of flowers, a sanctuary for birds. And it boasts a nine-hole golf course as sporty as any in the land—and perfectly kept. A dozen or more men are employed just to keep it in shape. I remarked to one of them that it would take a millionaire to support the place. And the brown-visaged worker replied: "A millionaire couldn't support it, man. It takes a multi-millionaire to have a place like this." Carl Laemalle lives next door. His backyard adjoins Harold's. As I passed Mary Pickford's gray Rolls-Royce at the door, I thought of what Mr. Laemmle remarked to Will Hays about the movies. He said: "Well, Will, it's a great business anyway." And so it is.

Gary Cooper, tall, slender and brown as a birch in the autumn, is going to play the lead in "Wolf Song" next. It's a wild story of western adventure, written by Harvey Ferguson. It's an ideal yarn for the pictures. And Gary's an ideal hero for the yarn.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FAMILY STANDARDS

By RUBY RANDOLPH

KITTY MARSTON had had courage enough to defy the standards of her family, of which no female member had ever toiled outside the home, and had secured a position as secretary to a big corporation lawyer in the city.

Kitty was forced to admit that the luck of the Irish had been with her in obtaining this position. Mr. Felson's secretary had been ill and an employment agency had sent her as substitute. She had worked with diligence and enthusiasm and when it developed that the former secretary required a long rest and change of climate, Kitty had slipped easily into the job.

Now, although it was Saturday afternoon and after five-thirty, she typed briskly, her eyes scanning the contracts she was copying, in order to incorporate a certain minor revision. Mr. Nelson was leaving for New York that night, and Monday morning he would require these contracts to close an important deal.

Kitty didn't mind working overtime, because Mr. Nelson was especially cordial then—he had been very appreciative this afternoon.

When she returned from lunch, he had observed pleasantly: "Some one has had a very becoming marcel," and Kitty had beamed happily. She liked a man who noticed things; it was so much more chummy working with a human boss than with a grouch.

"Are the contracts finished?" Mr. Nelson queried.

The office atmosphere became alive, vibrant with the radiation of his electric personality.

"Just through," said Kitty brightly, smiling up at him.

He leaned across her typewriter to reach the contracts on the other side, rather than walking around her chair, and Kitty was vividly conscious of the proximity of his big, warm body. At the same moment she recalled that he had a very nice wife and a little girl.

"Miss Marston, I have one or two very important letters"—he glanced at his watch—"Do you suppose—is it asking too much?" The rich glow of his smile enveloped her.

"Oh, no, I'll be glad to," she responded quickly.

It was approaching seven when she laid the letters, which had exceeded the number specified, on his desk.

"Miss Marston, have I made you late for supper?" he questioned contritely.

"That's all right; I'll be able to find something."

"But it will be cold," he persisted. "I have detained you for this special work, and I really feel that I should buy your supper. Won't you allow me to take you to some little restaurant? It will not violate the standards of your family for me—" he broke off with a little disarming laugh.

"It probably would," Kitty stated, joining in his laugh, "but the standards of my family are not mine."

He regarded her with interest as she accepted the signed letters he extended.

While she folded and inserted them into envelopes, the telephone bell tingled sharply.

"Yes, honey," Mr. Nelson responded in a tone which was more exasperated than honeyed. "No; don't save supper. I won't be home for an hour or two; I'm taking a good-looking girl out to supper." He winked jovially at Kitty.

She thought it was nice of him to be so frank and open with his wife. After all she herself was modern and completely emancipated from the standards of her family. Good food in a brightly lighted restaurant would be much more attractive than cold pickups at her boarding house. What harm would it be anyway? Perhaps Mr. Nelson wanted to tell her some items she should attend to during his absence.

Suddenly she was aware of a change in the bright, warm atmosphere of the room.

Mr. Nelson's voice was distinctly angry. "Well, Merle, for pity's sake, don't get huffed, when I'm going to New York a whole day early just on your account, so we can spend tomorrow sight-seeing; otherwise, I'd wait until Sunday night."

A pause. "Put anything in my bag, anything; I tell you I don't care. Yes; save my supper, I'll be home; have a little work still to do. Tell Betty to go to bed and stop crying. I'll kiss her goodbye when I come in."

Evidently the woman on the other end of the line had not taken a platonic view of his casually-mentioned supper engagement.

Quietly Kitty put on her hat and coat.

"All right, Miss Marston, ready to go to supper?"

He was friendly and jovial again, his sinister anger entombed far beneath.

Kitty's eyes went blank for the fraction of a second; then she realized that he had lied to his wife. He would eat two suppers.

"No, really, Mr. Nelson, I know you are terribly busy getting off tonight and everything. I can find some supper all right."

"Oh, I have all the time in the world," he glanced at his watch, "nothing to do between now and 11 o'clock."

"You'll have to pack," Kitty vouchsafed.

"Oh, Merle will have things packed. Golly! I hope this trip will improve her disposition. She's been pretty raw lately."

For some reason Kitty was not as sympathetic as she would have been 10 minutes earlier. She had visions of a tired wife waiting supper, putting to bed a baby girl crying for her daddy's good-by kiss, packing two suitcases, and yet expected by a disgruntled husband to be enthusiastically grateful for inclusion on a business trip.

"No, really, Mr. Nelson, I couldn't think of taking your valuable time tonight."

"Oh, that's all right," he blustered.

Kitty bit her lip. She must not offend him.

"And little Betty wants you to kiss her good-bye before she goes to sleep," she urged with eloquence born of the moment.

The man hesitated.

Kitty took advantage of the loophole. "Is there anything special for me to do Monday?"

"Yes; call Mosby and Greene and ask them to return those deeds, and remind Lewis Fleming that Tuesday is the last day of his note." His manner had lapsed into the professional again.

"Well, good-bye, Miss Marston; I appreciate your working this afternoon."

"Good-bye; I hope you have a good trip."

Kitty turned her coat collar up and marched bravely off to her cold supper. Unconsciously she was living up to the standards of her family.

CHURCHES UNITE FOR SERVICES

Slim Sunday evening attendance at church services during the warm weather has resulted in a number of congregations uniting for evening worship. Union services will be held tomorrow night at Carnegie Music Hall, West Park; the Calvary Episcopal Church lawn on Shady avenue; the Bethany English Lutheran Church in Dormont, and the Bellevue Y. M. C. A. lawn.

The Sunday program at Old St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, Liberty avenue and Seventeenth street, calls for the blessing of automobiles after all services. A model of St. Christopher or of St. Francis of Rome, blessed with Lourdes water, will be presented to each car. The Feast of Mt. Carmel will be celebrated at Old St. Patrick's Monday with special devotion to the scapular. The Rev. A. C. Angel, of Mars, Pa., will be heard from Old St. Patrick's over station WJAS at noon next Tuesday and next Friday.

The new Wesley Center A. M. E. Zion Church at Center avenue and Francis street will be dedicated tomorrow. It seats 2,000 and cost $225,000. The Rev. E. L. Madison is the pastor.

CALVARY SERVICE

The Rev. David Lang, pastor of Shady Avenue Presbyterian Church, will preach at the Calvary lawn community service. The Calvary's men's chorus and the Parillo Brass Quartet will furnish music under the direction of Frederick Chapman, organist. The churches joining in worship are Calvary, East End Christian, Shady Avenue Presbyterian, Shady Avenue Baptist, Point Breeze Presbyterian, and the Church of God in College avenue.

The Rev. Paul J. Mackenesen, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Knoxville, will be the speaker at the Dormont-Mt. Lebanon union service in the Bethany English Lutheran Church, West Liberty avenue and Park boulevard.

Dr. Robert M. Campbell will speak at the West Park meeting.

Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, will deliver, at the services tomorrow, his last messages before going on vacation. He will spend part of his vacation in Eastern Canada, where he will preach and also make a study of the Canadian government system of liquor control. He will report on these studies when he returns in the autumn.

The Rev. Dr. Benjamin F. Farber, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, New York City, will preach at Point Breeze Presbyterian Church at the morning service.

VISITING MINISTERS

Dr. Farber formerly was pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church of this city.

In the absence of Dr. H. P. Eckhardt, the Rev. William Walker, of Oakmont, will preach in St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Center and Morewood avenues.

A visiting minister, the Rev. Dr. John M. Gaston, will fill the pulpit at the Edgewood Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Dr. O. Stewart Michael, of New York, will conduct the service at St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

Dean Coffman will speak at the Yogoda Sat-Sanga Center, 3414 Fifth avenue, Oakland, on "The Ancient and Modern Enumeration."

In the absence of the Rev. Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney, Dr. Martin E. Anderson will preach at both morning and evening services at the First Presbyterian Church.

NEW MEMBERS

Communion services will be held at Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, when 20 new members will be welcomed, making 123 in the last year.

A special program of music will be rendered by the double and male quartet choirs. Dr. Shelton will speak on "Does It Pay to be Good?"

A Sunday program of particular interest to the stranger within the city has been arranged by the Salvation Army for its meeting in headquarters, 425 Second avenue. At 11 a. m. Ensign W. G. Crouch will speak on "Defiled by Sin," and, at 8 a. m. on "The Great Day of the Lord." Music will feature the Sunday school at 2.

J. Ramsey Cutler, of the National Reform Association, will speak Sunday at 11:00 a. m. in the Bethel A. M. E. Church on "The Greatest and Most Popular Book."

A COMPLETE NOVEL — by the world's most famous authors—EVERY SUNDAY—In THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH. Romance — Adventure — Thrills—Suspense—Action—Mystery—LOVE! Next Sunday—July 15—"SHOW BOAT"—By Edna Ferber—a record breaking best seller as a book—a Broadway hit as a play.

MILK FUND GETS LARGEST GIFT

The largest gift of the season to The Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund is made today by a "Ladies East End Bridge Club," a group of friends who have contributed annually to the fund for several seasons and whose donation of $60, together with two others, has carried the fund almost to another hundred dollar mark.

J. L. C. adds a contribution of $5, and the Willison Audit and System Company, another regular contributor, is listed for $10.

There are all sorts of promising things in prospect for the fund, among them a benefit which a group of Woodlawn avenue (Wilkinsburg) children are working up. This same band of playmates gave an entertainment last year and raised a tidy sum for the fund and are hoping to make even more this time when they hold their annual event on the night of July 23.

Another company of workers in the good cause have arrangements made to rope off a block for a street fair in Ingram next Tuesday night. So it looks as if those babies down at Milk and Ice headquarters will be smiling more brightly than ever. At least we are sure they would if they knew their milk is to be paid for out of the fund and not from borrowed money as it is at present.

The CONSTANT FLAME

by Winifred Van Duzer

Marty Comes to Help Kitten and Emily Through the Trial

KITTEN'S face contorted; she ran the tip of her tongue over her lips. "I know nothing about it!"

"She's just a baby!" Emily cried miserably. "Just a baby!"

The Chief smiled and glanced at the flaming mop. Out of the deadly stillness in her heart Emily regarded her sister, seeing her as if she were a stranger.

Always she had thought of Kitten as a little thing, petulant, capricious child with carefully guarded small secrets, a craving for thrills.

Now she realized it was all wrong. Kitten was 19—grown up. Old enough to love and be loved; old enough, perhaps, to carry on an affair with Nicky Wickert!

That burned itself into her thought, sent a smothering heat over her. Supposing it were true that Kitten had met him; that she had gone to the roadhouse with him last night?

"You—you woudn't arrest her? She's—oh, this terrible thing will be cleared. Ruin her life if—if suspicion—" Tears fell now, blurring the words.

It was Randall who put out a great paw and patted her shoulder. "Don't get upset, Miss Emmy. We'll just leave her in your care, see? Don't let her be going out of town is all.

"And they'll want her at the inquest tomorrow. Nothing rough; just some questions."

The chief said, kindly, "We'll make it easy as we can for you, Miss Day."

Emily sobbed "Thank you," and they went away. It was long afterward that she knew just how considerate they had been.

Kitten sat as she had throughout the interview, huddled on the divan. Agnes gave way to hysteria.

"My baby! If your poor father'd lived this wouldn't happen. It's like he said of the wealthy ones; they'll find ways to grind us."

"Hush, Muz. It will all come right. Only . . . Kitten dear, tell Emmy; why do they say you were there last night? Why did he ask if you came home alone? And about the alley?"

"I know nothing about it. Don't know what they mean."

"Of course, she don't! I'll not have you hector the child, Emmy. Muz understands her lamb."

In desperation Emily telephoned Marty. She knew nothing of legal procedure and felt she must have someone to turn to.

He came at once, looking mildly excited. "Just ready to start up here when you called. I told you to keep an eye on her."

"You'd heard, then? Everybody knows?"

"Certainly not. But when Wickert was plugged—why didn't you keep her home, Em?"

"She's been home. Night after night—you don't believe it, Marty? Why, she knows nothing about it!"

He walked along the side of the house, Emily following in a fervor of pleading. At the back he stopped, scanned the trellis.

"That her window up there?"

"Yes. Marty, you can't believe it! No one could!"

He looked at the window and the kitchen roof, an extension covered with tin. The dust of early summer lay upon it, but there was a clear place just below the sill. On a line with this a board of the trellis was splintered slightly and a few leaves crushed.

It escaped Emily. But she had a sharp recollection of the night she had gone to Kitten's room and found her in the new dress with her hair done bizarrely and jet loops in her ears. Was she planning to go out then?

The thought made her feel a little ill.

"You can't guess what the kids are like in this town, Em. I'll talk to her now." He added, grimly, "Alone."

She took him to her sister and he forestalled Kitten's denial. "I'm not saying you know anything about this. We'll just talk a while. And you'd better start right in now to trust me."

They went up to the sunroom, Marty stalking ahead and the girl following. She went reluctantly, drawn as by a horrible fascination.

And Emily thought, with a surge of the old bitterness, "The sunroom turned out to be of some use after all. Going to be all beauty, it was, and now they talk of murder there."

They were together a long time. Once she heard Kitten cry out; afterward they were quiet enough.

Agnes, moving about the kitchen, kept wiping her eyes. "You see who's a friend in need, Emmy. A fine lad, that Marty. Coming to fight for us—a great-hearted one, he is."

But Emily doubted that great-heartedness had brought him. She had gathered something of worldly wisdom and she questioned if Marty would be in her home unless the judge had sanctioned it.

Perhaps there was some way or other in which the ring saw a chance to discredit Kent by taking hold of the matter. She was skeptical enough to believe that.

There stirred in her thought a vision of Kent not as the boy she had woven dreams about, but as the District Attorney, a cold, impersonal agent of the law; a figure who would try to prove her little sister guilty of murder. And she was all at once in a tumult. Would Kent believe Kitten guilty?

She had heard that prosecuting attorneys often tried to prove guilty those they knew to be innocent; that they boasted the number of convictions they brought about to show how clever they were.

Would Kent do this? The boy she had idealized, thought so fine and so square—was he indeed the thoroughbred she had thought him? Would he run true to form?

She tried to believe with all her strength that he would. Yet she could not but be afraid. Life was strange, making so many promises and never fulfilling them.

She felt a little reassured when Marty brought Kitten down. The girl wasn't so tense as she had been.

"We understand each other," he said. "We'll get along."

CHAPTER XLV.

THE inquest wasn't terrible in the beginning.

Gruff old Coroner Gade behind a table, a witness chair placed side-wise before it. A kitchen chair, Emily noted. A stenographer riffled the leaves of his note-book at the right.

A few whom she didn't know gathered in the small office; Kitten watchful-eyed, apparently calm, but with her hands twisting.

Gade hung his glasses on the end of his nose and mumbled; a dark young fellow who kept darting nervous glances about sat down on the edge of the chair.

"Your name is Pete Mercurio?"

"Yeh."

"You're a waiter at Deep Valley Inn?"

"Yeh."

"The young lady over there, the one with red hair, you saw her at the Inn night before last?"

The darting eyes shifted; Emily felt a quiver go over her sister. The man answered "Yeh."

"Was anyone with her? If so, whom?"

"Boss, I know nossing—"

Gade fixed him with a cold stare, glasses vibrating. "Who was with her?" he thundered.

"Boss, I sink-a da Meestair Weeckert. Yeh."

"Very well. You served them liquor?"

"Well, dees Meestair Weeckert he say, 'Pete,' he say, 'what-a da chance for da leetle drink—'"

"Yes or no!"

"Oh, yeh."

The examination went on. It was established that Wickert and the red-haired young lady had arrived at Deep Valley Inn about midnight and a sizeable quantity of alcoholic beverage had been taken to the private dining room they occupied.

SALVAGE HEAD INDICTED IN PGH. FIRE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 14.—George M. Ruddy, general agent of the Underwriters Salvage Company, New York City, was indicted yesterday by the Federal grand jury on a charge of accepting $10,000 from Martin Steinfeld, an officer of the Surplus Mercantile Company, Inc., in connection with the alleged turning over by Ruddy to the Surplus company all of the salvage stock of the Pittsburgh Dry Goods Company, following a fire on October 16, 1927.

More than $1,400,000 in stock is claimed to have been taken over by Ruddy after the fire.

Fined for Killing Garden Rabbits, Prefers Jail

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 14.—Bert S. Norman, who shot two rabbits which had invaded his garden and banqueted on his vegetables, was arrested by Game Warden George Bower for shooting game out of season. Fined $25 by Justice I. Adler, Norman claimed he was protecting his property from marauders and as a protest went to the county jail.

THOUSANDS SEE 'KIDS' ARTIST

Thousands of Pittsburgh boys and girls heard Ad Carter, creator of the "Just Kids" comic strip and the Just Kids Safety Club over KDKA, Westinghouse radio station, last night at dinner hour. He invited as many as can crowd into two theaters to see him draw the famous characters today. He is a guest of The Sun-Telegraph this week.

Mr. Carter's first appearance for the members of the club was at 9 a. m. today in the Grand Theater, downtown. Ten a. m. was the hour for the Sheridan Square Theater, in East Liberty.

Rain prevented the famed cartoonist from making visits to several orphanages here yesterday, but last night he appeared at the Harris South Hills Theater, Dormont; the Sheridan Square and the downtown Harris. He will be on the bill of these three theaters again tonight. He and Mrs. Carter will leave Pittsburgh tomorrow for Chicago.

While Mr. Carter was speaking to the Pittsburgh members of the club, Mrs. Carter was in The Sun-Telegraph office helping a staff of five girls send out membership cards and buttons, emblematic of membership. The pledge of membership is, "I promise to look up and down before I cross the street."

The membership in The Sun-Telegraph Just Kids Safety Club approached the 50,000 mark early today, following an avalanche of letters from children wishing to join since seeing and hearing Mr. Carter.

There are more than 2,000,000 members in the 100 clubs in the United States and Canada. The "Just Kids" comic strip, one of the series for which the William Randolph Hearst newspapers annually pay more than $2,000,000, is issued in 200 newspapers throughout the world.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

July Comes to Fore With Many Weddings to Enliven an Otherwise Colorless Season

PANHELLENIC -:- ACTIVE IN BENEFIT -:- MONDAY NIGHT

Miss Susan Rush is helping with plans for the Panhellenic benefit by which the members hope to increase their scholarship fund.

JULY is about as far from being the "month of weddings" as it could be, but we have had two or three very pretty ceremonies this month, just the same. Several others are scheduled for this month, too, so the season is not entirely colorless.

From what I could learn, Pauline Lingenfelser's wedding to Howard E. Wilson, son of the Curtin Meade Wilsons, of South Atlantic avenue, is going to be a most attractive one. Pauline, you know, is the daughter of Frederick Lingenfelser, of South Negley avenue, and she will be married tonight at 6:30 o'clock in her home with the Rev. Charles E. Dover performing the ceremony. Pauline's father will give her away and she will wear a period gown of ivory taffeta with a skirt made in flounces, the last drooping to the floor to form the train in back. Her tulle veil will be held in place with a close coronet of orange blossoms, and she will carry white roses and lilies of the valley.

All the girls in the bridal party will wear dresses made alike, but in different colors. The frocks have fitted satin bodices and circular tulle skirts reaching to the floor. The maid of honor, Jane Inez Bast, will wear orchid, and the bridesmaids will be Grace DeWall, in yellow, and Gertrude and Grace Jones, twin sisters, in green. Around their arms they will wear ribbon bands to match their frocks and will carry roses and summer flowers.

There will be two small flower girls, Suzanne Becker, daughter of the Edward A. Beckers, of South Negley avenue, wearing pink voile, and Dorothy Fischer, daughter of the William G. Fischers, of South Negley avenue, in orchid-dotted Swiss. They will carry Colonial bouquets.

Charles L. Galanot, of Hartford, Conn., will be Mr. Wilson's best man, and the list of ushers will include Daniel J. Brady, of Fort Dodge, Ia.; Clifford V. Brown, of Tiffin, O.; Les M. Depp and Joseph P. West, of Pittsburgh.

A reception and dinner will be held after the service, with covers laid for 16 at the bridal table. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are going to motor in Canada and when they get back, about August 1, they will be at home in South Atlantic avenue.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the wedding are Miss Louise Sommer, of Newark, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Stahl, of Baltimore; Miss Anna Ziegelbrier, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Specht, of Stoyestown; Mrs. Katherine Maxwell, of Lisbon, O., and Mrs. Richard B. Nagle, of Cincinnati.

PERHAPS you remember my telling you that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon was going abroad to join his son, Paul. Now, I understand, he sailed on Thursday on the Majestic and with him were William L. Mellon, of Darlington road, and the latter's son, William L. Mellon, Jr., and daughter, Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., the former Margaret Mellon. They are planning to stay abroad until September, and then return on an especially constructed ocean-going yacht which is now nearing completion in Germany.

I HEAR that the Junior John B. Dumonts, of Frederick avenue, Sewickley, are planning to leave Monday morning to drive to Muskoka Lake, where they will visit Dr. and Mrs. Charles Parfitt at Gravelhurst, Ontario. Later, the Dumonts will go on by motor to Saranac Lake, where they will stay for a while and then go on to drive through lower New England and the Berkshires to New London, Conn. From there they will go to Cape Cod, where they will be guests of Mr. Dumont's mother, Mrs. John B. Dumont, for several weeks.

MRS. FOLSOM BROCKMEYER, of Eastmont avenue, Dormont, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Clarice Brockmeyer, to Homer S. Pittinger, of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place early next March.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Florence Mary French, daughter of Robert G. French, of Thornbury, Ontario, formerly of Aspinwall, and Harry Wallace Klingensmith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Klingensmith, of Etna, which was solemnized last Saturday night at 6:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church of Aspinwall by the Rev. Arthur French, uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. Dr. H. A. Gearhart, pastor of the church. Miss Rachel Parsons, of Aspinwall, was maid of honor, and Miss Dorothy French was her cousin's bridesmaid. Dora Pearl Dyson, of Aspinwall, was flower girl, and the bride was given away by her brother, William French. Ralph Thomas, of Swissvale, was best man. A reception at the Roosevelt Hotel followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Klingensmith are taking a western trip and after August 1 will be at home in Wilson street, Etna.

Another sister, Miss Jean Snyder, will be bridesmaid, wearing pink chiffon and lace and carrying butterfly roses and snapdragon. Louise Sloan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Sloan, of Crafton avenue, will be flower girl and Ralph H. Snyder, brother of the bride, will be best man. A reception will follow the ceremony.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Adams will return to Pittsburgh and on August 4 will sail to make their home in Chichester.

NEW REGENT HOSTESS TO REVOLUTION DAUGHTERS

MRS. WILLIAM D. HAMILTON entertained with a charmingly informal tea yesterday afternoon, her guests being the committee chairmen of Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, of which the hostess is the new regent. The affair was held in Mrs. Hamilton's suite of rooms at the Hotel Schenley. Miss M. Neil Stewart poured.

Mrs. Hamilton has just returned from a short motor trip on which she was accompanied by Mr. Hamilton and her niece, Miss Caroline P. Haney. Their route took them to Foxburg and to Cooks Forest and they were over-night guests at Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook's home in Cooksville.

Mrs. Hamilton has made her chapter appointments as follows: Mrs. H. C. McEldowney, chairman of finance; Mrs. Mortimer Miller, memorials; Mrs. Howard W. Eavenson, patriotic education; Mrs. James E. Umbstaetter, entertainment; Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, hospitality; Mrs. Walter Fundenberg, Workshop for the Blind; Mrs. Walter Chess, music; Mrs. James B. Eisaman, Ellis Island; Mrs. Cooke Bausman, conservation and tree planting; Mrs. Alan Chandler, ushers; Mrs. Hubert W. Chapman, flag; Mrs. George W. Schmidt, history prizes; Mrs. William J. Askin, Americanization; Mrs. Biddle Arthurs, membership.

A NUMBER of the secretaries and instructors are missing from Central Branch, Y. W. C. A., these days, vacation plans having called them out of town. Miss Charlotte Wilcox, general secretary, is at Silver Bay, Lake George, for two weeks attending the "Y" conference and before returning will go to her home in Baltimore. Miss Esther Hawes, metropolitan secretary, is at her summer home in East Wolfeboro, New Hampshire. Miss Essie Mae Davidson and Miss Grace Wilson left last week for Columbia University to take summer courses there. Miss Davidson is secretary of general and religious education and Miss Wilson is in charge of employment at Central Branch. Miss Christina Sword, one of the instructors in the health department is at her home in Wilkes-Barre for a month; Miss Ina McCullough, of the room registry, is visiting in Cleveland and Detroit; Miss Mildred Mallonee, of the educational department, is in California for a month, and Miss Grace Schumaker, in charge of the cafeteria, expects to leave soon for a western tour that will take her through Yellowstone and home via the Panama Canal and California.

FOR the benefit of its scholarship fund, the Chartiers Woman's Clubs Association held a luncheon and card party in the Food Craft Shop yesterday. Mrs. Charles J. Vokach was chairman in charge of the affair which was attended by about 100 women.

THE annual Catholic Daughters of America outing is set for Tuesday, August 21, with Miss Margaret Kennedy, grand regent of Court East Liberty, as chairman of entertainment. A baby show will be a feature of the day.

THE July meeting of the Zoar Home Auxiliary will be held Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Kaufmann's dining room. Mrs. S. F. Gordon is president of the society.

* * *

MRS. MAY FORTWANGLER and Miss Katherine Rectenwald are joint chairmen for the "parking" which the Pittsburgh Girls' Club will hold Monday evening in Riverview Park.

PENNSYLVANIA CHAPTER, Order of the Eastern Star, has dispensed with its regular meetings for July and August, but will hold a card party on Tuesday evening in Moose Temple, Penn avenue. Mrs. Margaret Hall, Mrs. Kathryn Wills and Mrs. Daisy Hinkley are in charge.

* * *

THE women's section of the Dormont G. O. P., will form a Hoover Club next Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. W. R. Gardner, Glenmore avenue.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

THAT'S ALL A MAN ASKS

VERILY, my daughter, harems have passed away and the seraglio is no more!

* * *

But still do men continue to demand all the charms and accomplishments of a whole harem in ONE wife!

* * *

For it hath come to pass that a man no longer seeketh a cook, a valet, a nurse, a seamstress and a household pet for his delight; yet the life of a modern wife is by no means one long, sweet Saturday afternoon.

HELEN ROWLAND

Go to! Once a man desired only a fireside companion, who would sit beside him after dinner and hearken sweetly while he read her snatches from the evening paper.

But now he requireth a good sport and a little playmate, with a nerve of steel and a cast-iron constitution, who can peg a tent, drive a car, change a tire, wield a wicked dancing foot and carry her own grips. Yea, even a pal and a roughneck, who delighteth to share his games.

Once he asks only that the damsel of his choice be sweet and pretty and gracious withal.

* * *

But now he demandeth a Paris doll, who shall out-dress the manikins and serve as a show-piece wherewith to dazzle his friends and rouse the envy of his rivals.

Once he asked only that the wife of his bosom keep his meals hot, his house swept and his garments mended.

* * *

But now he requireth one that shall run his house with one hand while she playeth golf with the other, and keepeth him AMUSED, today, yesterday and forever.

* * *

Once he desired only a woman who would blink at his faults and blind herself to his sins.

* * *

But now he sigheth for one who will understand his complexes, indulge his weaknesses and invite his women friends and his play-fellows to the house.

* * *

Once he required only a woman that would comfort and console him.

* * *

But now he requireth one that shall vamp him, jolly him, entertain him and inspire him.

* * *

And only a prize-winner, with the figure of a Follies beauty, the face of Helen of Troy, the wit of Ed Wynn, the agility of a fireman, the constitution of Gene Tunney and the enthusiasm of a cheer leader will satisfy him!

* * *

How, then, can any damsel hope to be ALL things to one man, which is the Ideal Wife?

SELAH!

INGRAM WINS IN DAMAGE CASE

The borough of Ingram has won a victory in a damage case in an opinion handed down by the Superior Court, it became known here today. Nanny J. Curry tripped and fell over a water curb box on the sidewalk in front of property owned by Hackmeister in 1920. She sued the borough and was awarded $1,750, which the borough paid. The borough then sued Hachmeister for the amount. A jury found in favor of Hachmeister, but the court threw out the jury verdict and ordered judgment against Hachmeister for the amount involved. The higher court ruled that the local court was right, according to the evidence, in finding for the borough, despite the verdict of the jury. Attorney J. M. Russell represented the borough.

ROBBERS BREAK INTO AND LOOT MEAT SHOP

The meat market of Victor Michalski, 5500 Butler street, was entered last night by robbers who forced open a rear window. They took $21.50 from the cash register and in addition hams and bacon valued at $12.

BURGLARS FORCE DOOR, TAKE $35 IN CLOTHING

Burglars forced open the rear door in the home of Frank Zumia, 2736 Penn avenue, last night and stole clothing valued at $35.

HEALTH CARE WELL WORTH THE COST

[In closing this series of articles in The Sun-Telegraph the health committee of the Chamber of Commerce, of which J. B. Nessle is chairman deems it well to say that its only purpose in putting the matter before the public is to save human life and prevent needless human suffering.]

Periodical health examinations are worth a hundred times what they cost because they head off disease and increase working efficiency, whether the worker is a young clerk or the chief executive of great industry.

In addition to the diseases mentioned in previous articles there are others widely prevalent which periodical examination will make far less frequent.

Take apoplexy, for instance, the leading life insurance companies have for years required the observation of blood pressure in all applicants, and either an abnormally high or an extremely low pressure is cause for rejection or postponement of the risk or for exaction of a higher premium. A blood pressure which is going up in a threatening manner may be reduced by proper diet and habits of living, and apoplexy may thereby be averted.

As for kidney diseases to which so many of hundreds of thousands of lives have been sacrified, Urinalysis at once detects the presence of these diseases and if proper treatment is immediately begun the disease may be cured or at least the life of the patient may be greatly prolonged.

Readers of The Sun-Telegraph who desire further information on these subjects can secure it either from their family physicians or from the Community Affairs Division of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

DRIVER HURT AS AUTO HITS POLE

When his automobile crashed against a pole in Center avenue near Chaucer street early today, Ralph McAllister, 26, of 7516 Center street, Swissvale, was injured seriously. He is in the Montefiore Hospital suffering a probable fracture of the skull.

Three boys were injured last night when struck by an automobile while playing in Fifth avenue near Pride street. They are William Morris, 6, and Preston Cypress, 8, both of 8 Pride street and Frank Leff, 12, of 41 Townsend street. They were taken to the Mercy Hospital. Regis Cherry, 24, of 5212 Butler street was driving the machine, police say.

Wheezing Season Claims Victims

MY mail contains inquiries about hay fever. The sufferers are seeking relief.

One man writes that on the fifth of August for 10 years he has had the first evidence of this trouble. Another person writes that for the month of July she is troubled with this annoyance and for the rest of the year is perfectly well. Every victim appears to have a set time to suffer from the symptoms of hay fever.

DR. COPELAND

The pollen from certain flowers, the dust from hay, the dandruff from horses, dogs or cats, and the effects of certain vegetables, are among the most common exciting factors in bringing on hay fever.

As soon as the susceptible person is exposed to the exciting cause of hay fever the first of a chain of symptoms appear. Sneezing, difficult breathing, feeling of fullness in the head, inability to sleep, loss of appetite and constant fatigue, all appear. The nasal and breathing symptoms are usually most acute.

It has been found by a series of tests what particular thing is responsible for the trouble. These "sensitization tests" are made as follows: If, for example, tomatoes or the pollen of roses is thought to be the irritation article, a serum is made from this substance.

The affected person is then tested by injecting under his skin a small amount of this particular serum. If there is a reaction and the doctor decides to go further, the serum is given at regular intervals until the system becomes protected against the disease.

In many cases, however, after every test has been exhausted the hay fever still persists. Some day we may complete our knowledge. Until then we must be satisfied as best we can be.

Change of climate, local treatment for the nasal irritation, and care of the diet are most important. Wherever any foodstuff is found to be the cause, this article must be entirely eliminated from the diet.

There are many preparations for use in inhalers and sprays which give temporary relief and promote sleep. Your doctor will advise you about these.

Stramonium leaves and nitrate of potash burned together are helpful in some cases. This is a common treatment for asthma and may be useful in hay fever.

Opiates should never be taken except under the doctor's instruction. As a matter of fact, the medication should be confined to the advice of the physician.

Most large hospitals now have a special clinic for treatment of hay fever sufferers. Here the best doctors give advice which does much to relieve the victim of hay fever.

Most sufferers from this disease, if they can afford to do so, are best aided by change of climate. The President has found this to be the most satisfactory method to employ and others have followed this practice for years.

THE ACTRESS DOES NOT WASTE TIME BEMOANING HER DEFECTS BUT MAKES THE MOST OF HER GOOD POINTS!
MEN ALWAYS FALL IN LOVE WITH ACTRESSES
COLD CREAM
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

ACTRESSES attract because the stage is the most flattering frame a girl can have.

Actresses seem better looking and more charming because they have learned to look their best and smile through everything.

Girls of the stage do not become discouraged because others in the company are prettier than they.

Each has confidence in her own looks. Each appears lovely in her own way.

There is much that the business girl can learn from the actress.

Little chorus girls look stunning in their simple and limited street wardrobes because they mend and press and wash and iron and never appear less than perfection itself in what they can afford to wear.

Cronin's Return to Big Show Pleases Pirate Bosses and Fans—Stallings Near Death as Old Team Plays Here—Sensational Pennant Drive Recalled—Corbett Showed Fighter Could Have "IT" While Lacking Punch.

NOT even Joe Cronin himself, with all his boyish baseball enthusiasm and his ambition to get back in the major leagues, got more pleasure or a bigger kick out of the news that he had been purchased by the Washington American League Club from Kansas City than did the host of admirers and friends that he won in the Pittsburgh district while wearing the uniform of a Pirate.

Joe Cronin

The zeal and personality of the clean-living young athlete, while trying hard to win a berth on the Buccaneer crew, made him one of the most popular players ever connected with the Pittsburgh team, and the news that he is to get another chance to make good in the majors came as a pleasing bit of information to the army of fans that had been his ardent boosters and rooters here.

IT was with regret that the Pirate management finally let Cronin go to Kansas City outright after concluding that he would not be able to cure himself of his over anxiousness here.

An optional deal was impossible, however, as baseball law prohibits the sending out of a player under option more than twice, and Cronin had already been sent to Johnstown in one season and to New Haven in another.

PIRATE leaders also expressed pleasure that Cronin had returned to the majors.

"He is a fine boy and I wish him all the luck in the world," said President Dreyfuss.

"Good for Joe!" exclaimed Manager Bush when he learned of the youngster's sale to Washington. "I hope he makes good for the Senators from the first day, and that this chance will be his lucky one. He surely deserves to succeed if any young player ever did."

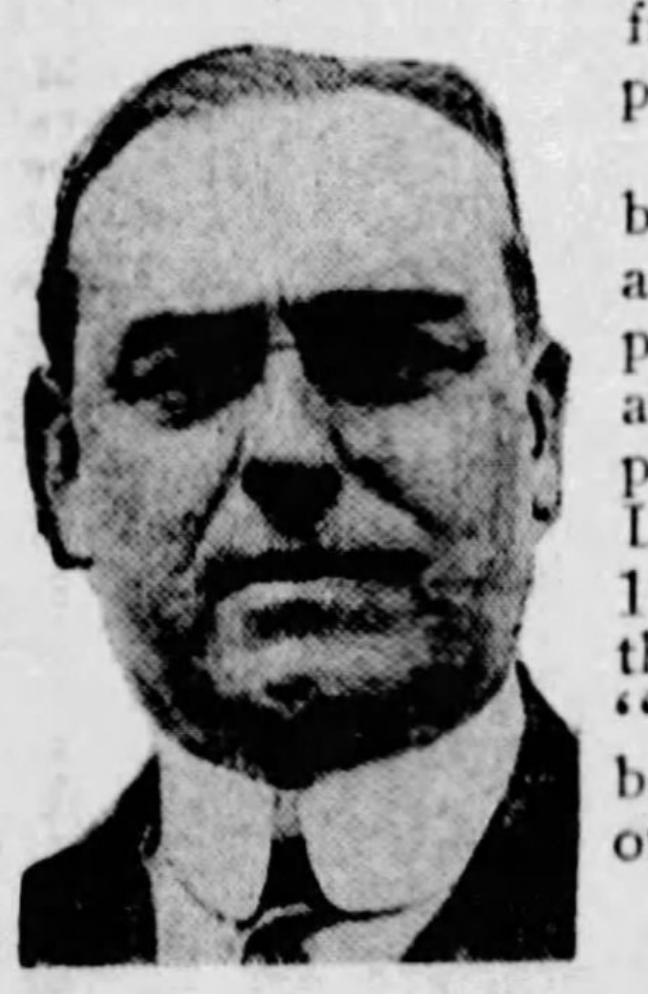
IN a letter to The Sun-Telegraph, William F. O'Brien, a Pirate booster in Franklin, Pa., suggests some minor league pitchers, most of them once tried in the majors, whom he thinks might be picked up by the Bucs to the advantage of the local club. He writes: "Two more pitchers are needed by Pittsburgh, and in the getting of them I think the following should be looked over by the Pirate scouts: Zinn, Kansas City; Burwell, Indianapolis; Mitchell, San Francisco; Brillheart, Minneapolis; Liska, Minneapolis; Wingard, Milwaukee; Heimach, St. Paul, and Betts, also of St. Paul. All of these are pitchers who should not be in the minors.

Jimmy Zinn

"TRUE, Zinn, was with Pittsburgh once, but he is a much-improved hurler now—a real winning pitcher for his team. And maybe it wouldn't please Jimmy to be back with Pittsburgh. Burwell, we know, also was with the Bucs for a brief stay, but I think Bill should come back.

"BRILLHEART and Liska are doing well for Minneapolis. Liska is a submarine artist and should be good. Brillheart was with the Cubs, but he is too good a left-hander to pass up. Wingard is having a fine season. He is another southpaw who could help Fussell out. Heimach and Betts, particularly the former, are shining for St. Paul and are said to be sought by a number of clubs."

WHILE the Boston team is playing here, the man who once led it to the most sensational pennant victory in all the history of major league baseball is near death, suffering from a heart ailment, at a private hospital in Macon, Ga.



George Stallings

Stallings has been a figure in baseball during 40 of his 62 years, and for a long time was one of the game's most prominent characters, but he surpassed all his other achievements when he piloted the Bostonese to the National League pennant and the world series in 1914. As the result of that feat he was the first manager to be called a "miracle man," though attempts have been made to apply the title to several others since.

THAT pennant drive of 14 years ago has never been equaled in baseball. Boston, the cradle of the game, is a charter member of the National League, which took the field in 1876, and played in the National Association, the first of all leagues from 1871 to 1875, but among all the achievements of its teams in that long period there is none to compare with that of 1914. As late as July 19, the club was in last place with a record of 35 games won and 43 lost, percentage .449, but then it began, under the leadership of Stallings, the remarkable drive in which it won 59 and lost only 16 games from that date until the finish, a gait of .787.

THE Braves distanced all the other clubs for the National League pennant, and then topped off the great drive by beating the Athletics four times in a row.

Since Stallings left the club after the 1920 season, Boston has had four other managers in Fred Mitchell, Dave Bancroft, Jack Slattery and Rogers Hornsby. The team has finished in the first division only twice since 1914.

GENE TUNNEY'S lack of "IT" as a champion is attributed by most fans to the fact that he never has been particularly noted as a hitter. Yet Jim Corbett was never particularly

JUNIORS TO PLAY MONDAY

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

PLANS definitely have been made for the playoff of the ties for places and prizes of The Sun-Telegraph's first annual free West Penn amateur junior golf tournament for the William Randolph Hearst trophy, which was played over the Schenley Park Municipal links Thursday. The four boys who are tied for second, third and fourth place in the Junior Class will start their round at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, while the two boys who were deadlocked for second and third place in the Sub-Junior Class will tee off five minutes later.

That means that Mike Baysura, of Greenfield; Norman Gayford, of Erie; Mike Gula, of the North Side, and John Slocum, of Squirrel Hill, who turned in scores of 70 each to make strong bids for the runner-up honor to Joe Curto, who copped the event with a two-stroke margin, will play 18 holes medal, or as long thereafter as is necessary to decide second, third and fourth positions.

Thomas McDonough, brother of Pat, former city champion, and James Scajbarretti, of Duquesne, who registered 73s to trail Steve Sliviks, victor in the sub-junior class by three full strokes, will begin their playoff, also at 18 holes medal play, at 8:05 o'clock, daylight saving time, Monday morning. Mike Bakos captured the fourth prize with a 74 in the sub-junior class.

Another prize has been added to the 17 already announced. A special award of a gold medal will be

British Golfers Enter Western Amateur

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—The entire British Walker cup golf team of 10 leading players will compete in the Western amateur golf championship next month, has been announced here.

Robert M. Cutting, president of the Western Golf Association, received word from the Britons that they would be in Chicago for the event, which will be played over the Bob O'Link Club course August 20 to 25.

The three members of the American Walker cup team who do not live in W. G. A. territory also will be invited to enter, making the tourney one of the strongest international competitions ever known.

The invading golfers, as selcted by the Royal and Ancient Club on June 11, are T. P. Perkins, present British amateur champion; Cyril Tolley, 1920 titleholder; T. A. Torrance, Dr. William Tweddell, 1927 champion; E. F. Storey, Maj. C. O. Hezlet, W. L. Hope, Dr. H. R. MacCallum, J. P. Beck and R. H. Hardman.

TURF CROWN PRIZE TODAY

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP.)—The turf's four-year-old championship title rested today on the outcome of the $7,500 added sweepstakes special at Lincoln Fields, where Flat Iron, Chicago, Mike Hall and Handy Mandy had one race all to themselves.

As the only match race of the summer campaign, the special sweepstakes drew the interest of virtually all turfdom and the four entries were considered the cream of their class. All but Handy Mandy had to carry 126 pounds, the fleet Three-D stables' entry being allowed four pounds off.

In addition to the championship, the race carried a purse worth $10,000 and a silver plate donated by Stuyvesant Peabody, president of the Lincoln Fields Jockey Club, and owner of Flat Iron.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

LUKE CARNEY, of the stable of Luke Carney, Jack Zivic and Luke Carney, is doing the talking. He is telling about Jack's two fights out in California during his jaunt which wound up with his return to Pittsburgh the other day to remain here permanently. Jack's wife and baby daughter are here now in their new home in Gross street, in the vicinity of the home that the late Harry Greb built for himself there, and Jack's visits to New York in the future will be limited to fighting engagements or training. As has been intimated, Luke, of the firm of Luke, Jack and Luke, is doing the orating.

LUKE says, that is Luke Carney says, that they didn't do right by his Jack out there in Californy. In the first place, he got the works in the shape and form of his opponent's head in his first fight, at San Francisco, June 18, with Young Corbett, and, in the second bout, with Jackie Fields, things were even worse. Luke will give you the details in chronological order as soon as he catches his breath and you have time to listen.

"Now, this fellow Corbett," says Luke, "is one of them tall, rangy southpaws and a hard socker. He's knocked out Eddie Roberts and other tough babies and they can't get anybody to fight him. So they send for Zivic. You know how them muggs are for Jack—a dime a dozen, just like that. See?

"Well, this fellow was a hard nut to crack, what with being a southpaw and everything, but Jack was going along fine until the fourth round, when he tries to drop in a right on Corbett's unprotected jawbone and this fellow shifts as Jack comes forward and their heads think they're boxing gloves and kiss. When they got apart the blood was streaming down Jack's face from a deep cut on the left side of his forehead. He wasn't the same after that until the ninth round, when he began to come back and dropped Corbett momentarily. After the fight he didn't even get credit in the papers for that knockdown. A fine chance he had to win.

"WELL, after this bout I see that the cut is a bad one and we're matched with Jackie Fields at Los Angeles eight days later. I want to set back the show a couple of weeks, but Zivic says no. He's homesick and wants to get back to his folks, so we go through with the original date. Because of the cut the kid

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 14.—(AP.)—This usually tranquil community where Gene Tunney is training for the defense of his world's heavyweight title against Tom Heeny 12 days hence, is all agrog today over the first coming of Tex Rickard, promoter of the contest.

The promoter has never been here before and his reception today will be either amicable or cool. Depending on the location of the fight tickets which he was forced to exchange for the champion.

Tunney ordered about 300 tickets for friends and when Rickard first filled the order, but 20 of the seats were nearer to the ringside than the thirtieth row. When Gene displayed irritability, Rickard offered to take back the tickets and try to locate Tunney's friends in better spots.

Rickard's real purpose in making his first trip to this resort is to witness the champion's signature to the official contract for the fight.

Tunney refused to listen to suggestions that he postpone his ring work until Rickard reached the scene, but did agree to break his

ALLISON AND MERCUR IN FINAL ROUND PLAY

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 14.—(AP.)—Wilmer Allison, of Texas, and Fritz Mercur, of Lehigh, gained the final bracket of the New York state tennis tourney and will fight it out for the state championship today.

Mercur defeated Berkeley Bell, of Texas, 7-5, 6-4, 6-0, and Allison, after a struggle, downed Frank Shields, of New York, in five sets, 2-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

MGR. BUSH TO USE GRIMES ON HILL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE Boston Braves, obvious contenders for the consolation prize in the National League, are in town to challenge the Freebooters for four games, the first to be staged this afternoon. Accompanying the Tribe when it reached the city this morning was First-baseman George Sisler, who was a storm center of Pittsburgh baseball warfare 13 years ago.

Sisler, who was awarded to the St. Louis Browns by the defunct National Commission after the big baseball men had disallowed the claims of the Pirate owners, will make his boseball debut at Forbes Field today. In the interim he rose to unusual heights of the diamond pastime.

Sickness has dulled the zip in George's actions to a big extent, according to those who were close to him before his misfortunes; nevertheless he has been cutting quite a swath in National League play, despite the poor showing of his club.

The Braves seem formidable on paper, but they have been unable to swing into any winning strides recently. At the present time they are not far removed from the lowly Phillies, who yesterday went on their weary way to Chicago, they having been unable to win any of their five contests played in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

Burleigh Grimes will be on the mound for the Pirates this afternoon. Fred Fussell was down on the books for Thursday and Friday, rain spoiling both of these scheduled contests with the Quakers. Inasmuch as Grimes has had four full days of rest since he conquered the Giants, his boss and Burleigh both think it better for him to work in order to hold to his best stride.

The Braves are likely to counter with Eddie Brandt, the clever southpaw, who has made quite a reputation for himself this season. Manager Hornsby also has Bob Smth and Kent Greenfield available for duty and these two righthanders probably will start in the impending series.

The Pirates will entertain the folks of Wheeling tomorrow. Bush will take his team to the West Virginia stronghold for the purpose of contesting with the city's Mid-Atlantic League club. One of the young pitchers will do the twirling for the Buccos.

Martin, Morgan Hope to Box Tonight

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP.)—Tod Morgan and Cannonball Eddie Martin will try again to stage their on-again, off-again junior lightweight championship battle at Ebbets Field tonight.

Humbert J. Fugazy, promoter, has scheduled the affair six different times so far and may get some more practice. He figures, however, that the law of averages should give him some good weather tonight.

Another championship bout was thrown into the postponed column last night when rain prevented a 12-round battle between Izzy Schwartz, recognized as flyweight titleholder in this state, and Frisco Grande, Buffalo Filipino. The two mites will fight it out at Rockaway Stadium next Friday night, provided the weather permits.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

WELL, the big rain seems to have stopped everybody but those pesky Redbirds. Nothing short of a big wind will slow up that crew, it seems. Imagine John McGraw's embarrassment, after taking three defeats in Pittsburgh, to gaze across the field of St. Louis into the Cardinals dugout and see the classic features of Oil Smith. Add to this rare concoction a one-sided victory for the Cardinals and you have the elements of one of the wildest nightmares that one could think up for the leader of the New York team.

Smith can think of some very aggravating things to say when he is not engaged in the contest, and his Arkansas vernacular gives sharper teeth to what he broadcasts.

BASEBALL players throughout the land will hope for the recovery of George Stallings, one of the most striking figures that ever gave his efforts to the game. A rich landowner in Georgia and a medical student in his younger days, Stallings' love for the sport of the diamond was so deep that he risked heavy losses in personal property to give his attention to the call of the ball.

George was noted among players as a "hard loser," in the sense that he put on stormy scenes in the dugouts when his club played stupid ball. He was a rare sportsman, but it was hard for him to see his players go down to defeat. His remarkable vocabulary gave the game some contributions that are passed about by the athletes in fanning bees.

GEORGE could get a thrill out of watching a well-built athlete in any sportive profession. I sat next to him in Madison Square Garden last winter when Tommy Laughran and Jimmy Slattery staged what I thought was the greatest bout I ever saw, for various reasons. Stallings marveled at the speed, cleverness, condition and physiques of the two boxers.

"It was worth the price just to see those two boys in the ring without hitting a blow," said Stallings.

LEGION NINES CLASH TODAY

The Phoenix Club of Pittsburgh and the Liberty Auto nine of McKeesport are to clash at Forbes Field this evening in the final game of the American Legion Allegheny conty junior baseball championships. The junior teams are to take the field as soon as the Pirates-Braves game is finished, and no admission is to be charged.

The winner in this final game is to continue in the legion tourney with the West Penn, state and national titles its next goals.

Rain Cuts Into Card

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

WEATHER permitting—and if the performance of the elements yesterday is any indication of what is to come, the weather will not permit—the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League this afternoon will take up the cudgel where it left off last Saturday and advance another notch toward completion of its summer schedule.

Today's combats will mark the half-way point of the net circuit schedule. Actually, however, there have been so many postponements due to almost incessant rains during latter May and the whole of June, that the campaign may properly be said to have progressed over hardly more than a third of the path toward completion. Mid-week play-off dates, though, are even now being settled among the respective team captains so that it is hoped to have the race abreast of par by the end of the current month.

Interesting tilts are on the bill for both divisions of the loop this afternoon. In Section One, the pace-setting Stanton Heights aggregation will entertain Edgewood.

Tennis Standings

SECTION I.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Stanton Heights	13	5	.722
Westinghouse	14	10	.583
P. A. A.	10	8	.556
University Club	10	8	.556
College Hill	8	10	.444
College Avenue	10	14	.417
Edgewood	1	11	.083

SECTION II.

	W.	L.	Pct.
South Hills	18	8	.692
Mt. Lebanon	22	14	.611
Westinghouse	15	12	.556
Minnetonka	18	18	.500
West Park	14	21	.400
Philadelphia Co.	11	25	.306

The Stantonians will be minus the services of their leader, "Toots" Davis, who is vacationing, but with Marion Rinehart, Jack Beatty, Vin Glidden, Mabon Bovard, Bill Spindler and Bill Ritterbush still to draw upon they will undoubtedly present a strong line of battle. Capt. Moreland of the Edgewood array likewise aims to flash a powerful lineup, and inasmuch as Paul Hicks, erstwhile Princeton University net ace, has cast lot with the Suburbanites, it is probable that a warm affair is in store for the Heightsmen.

Westinghouse, second in the upper sector chase, will invade the East End for a clash with Howard Moore's College Avenue crew. The Moore host is due for a brace and would enjoy nothing better than triumph over the flying Electricians. Spirited milling is thus in prospect for the College-and-Walnut lot and the same should be the case at Beaver Falls, whither University Club is slated to travel to engage College Hill. The P. A. A. squad, fresh from impressive victory at the expense of the College Hillmen a week ago, is down for a rest this afternoon.

Section Two will find the speeding South Hills combine at work to tighten its grip on the top rung of the division ladder. Jimmy Mackay's Minnetonka host will furnish the opposition to Capt. Wolfe's cohort, and the scene of activity will be Verona. Out at the Panther Stadium, Philadelphia Company will be at home to Wilbur Parshley's Mt. Lebanon luminaries, while the Westinghouse secondary outfit will take on George McConn's West Parkers at Westinghouse.

OLYMPIC STARS DRILL ON SHIP

ABOARD THE S. S. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, via Radio, July 14.—(INS.)—The gesture of protest made by the New York Athletic Club against some of the official selections of the Olympic committee was the main topic of conversation today among the members of the American team on shipboard.

Between workouts the athletes pondered deeply on the fact that the club was sending five men across at its own expense because its officials feel these man should have been selected in their various events.

Three of these men, Matt McGrath, veteran hammer thrower; Roland Locke, former University of Nebraska sprint star, and Weems Baskin, star hurdler from Alabama, are sailing from New York on the S. S. Volendam. The other two, Norton Jackson, a wrestler, and Fait Elkins, Indian decathlon star, sail on the Berengeria tomorrow.

The officials of the New York A. C. feel that these men, although they failed to qualify for various reasons, are entitled to be on the Olympic team. Maj. Gen. Douglas McArthur, Olympian chairman, indicated in a statement yesterday that he would give an open ear to any protests.

All the various teams had stiff workouts yesterday. Today they settled down to real work, however, and most of them went through their paces twice. They will rest up tomorrow.

The first injury reported aboard was suffered by Colbath, a diver on the swimming team. He sprained his ankle when he slipped from the springboard. His injury was only slight, however.

PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO GUNNERS SHARE HONORS

CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., July 14.—(INS.)—Honors were evenly divided between Western Pennsylvania and Ohio today as the 80 Konne-Yaut Indians who are holding the annual trapshooting-fest here again took to the range to decide the championship.

Despite the steady rain all day yesterday the sportsmen turned in some good shooting, although no records were smashed.

Dr. H. C. Heisey, of McKeesport, took off the honors of the day when he decided a tie in the 150-target handicap with H. P. Hamilton, of Lisbon, O., by cracking 23 out of 25 birds.

Hamilton won a tie in the 50-target handicap from C. P. Staff, of Wampum, and W. J. Morgan, of Youngstown. He broke 23 out of 25 birds.

DOROTHY HURD WINS WOMEN'S GOLF TITLE

GROTON, Conn., July 14.—(AP.)—The wreath of victory rests on the head of Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Merion Cricket Club star, for the second successive year, when her opponent, Miss Edith Quier, of the Berkshire Club, playing in the women's golf final at the Shenecossett course, ran into difficulties on the incoming nine and was defeated yesterday 3 and 1.

noted as a puncher, and in spite of that he had more color than 20 Tunneys could show.

One veteran describes him as being a gifted "handshaker," a breezy talker, and as intellectually polished as Tunney could ever hope to be, and says that though he was the cleverest of them all he was not above entering a finish fight with a dangerous opponent in a lowly atmosphere, notably his meetings with Peter Jackson and Joe Choynski.

IT IS the opinion of Ed Hughes that even when seen only in training, Corbett was more interesting than Tunney fighting for or defending the world's championship. He calls Corbett the boxing wizard of all time. Jim didn't have the punch, but he did possess skill that was never seen before and that has since remained unequaled in the heavyweight class at least.

Jim Corbett

He was the will-o'-the-wisp, a hit-and-get-away genius, the master strategist of them all. An old-timer, writing of Corbett, reveals: "Even in his novice days the blows he used were Corbett blows, and, while I saw many attempts to imitate them back in the eighties, there were few who copied Corbett with any measure of success.

"ONE blow, or rather a brace of blows of his, I remember distinctly. It consisted of a double jolt, first on the ribs and then on the jaw. It was delivered without moving the feet or changing the position of the body. He had a dozen little rips and jolts with either hand which were peculiarly his own.

"Tunney has been compared with Corbett more than any one else, and not without logic. Yet, compared to the Corbett personality, ring skill and general lofty fistic brains, Tunney dwindles to practically nothing."

Tom to Wear Battle Robe Of Maori

FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 14.—(AP.)—When Heeney climbs through the ropes to meet Tunney in the Yankee Stadium, across his broad shoulders will be one of the strangest looking bath robes ever seen inside the ring. It is a Maori cloak, made of fiber and feathers, and presented to him by Lady Carroll, widow of Sir James Carroll, former member of the New Zealand Parliament.

The cloak is similar to the ones worn by chieftains of the natnve Maori tribesmen in New Zealand in time of battle.

ST. JOHN'S TO PLAY

The Jimmy Smith club of Greenfield will provide the attraction for the St. John's nine of the City League this evening at Sullivan field. Plenty of rivalry marks the playing of the games between these two clubs and a great game should ensue. It will be called at 6:30 sharp.

given Arthur Weltner, 13, 729 Naylor avenue, for the making of his hole in one—the only ace tallied in The Sun-Telegraph's tournament. Arthur used a spoon on the twelfth hole to score his ace.

The other prizes, which will be awarded at a dinner to be held Wednesday evening, include the beautiful William Randolph Hearst trophy, a solid gold medal and a fine golf club, which go to Joe Curto, 18-year-old winner of the junior class and the tourney; a gold medal and a club to the winners of t' first place in the sub-junior class and runners-up in each class; a silver medal and an iron golf club to the third-place men in each class; a silver medal to each of the fourth-place men, and another silver medal, a consolation prize, to the highest scorers in each class.

The tournament was a splendid success; except for the loss of a bag of clubs temporarily, not a thing marred the event. The clubs have been found and returned to their owner.

can't box in the gym and he goes into the ring short of training. And that's not the worst of it. I have my suspicions that they stuck a hunk of lead in Fields' glove in the second round, for he was hitting kind of funny with that duke and had Jack in a sort of a daze, and everybody knows Fields is no hitter.

"Well, Jack has been feeling funny for days, the climate having got him and ruined his appetite and so forth, and him being homesick to boot, so you can see he ain't right, but, just the same, he began to pull himself together after a while and was getting stronger, but Fields opened that cut from the Corbett fight and then Fields' gang began to root in the fight for him. They saw a chance to get a good name like Zivic's in Fields' record and yelled for the referee to stop it, which he did in the seventh round, with Zivic getting stronger. After the fight a doctor had to clean out that cut and put seven sitches in it, and that's all there was to the trip, but don't let anybody tell you Fields knocked him out, and I'm betting pearls to peanuts that they won't be able to drag Fields into a ring with Jack for a return bout anywhere in the East. By the way, that would be a great return fight for Pittsburgh in the fall, wouldn't it—Zivic against the only bird who ever got the kayo duke over him?"

ZIVIC, speaking for himself, said he may not do any more boxing until the fall. He is convinced that he is not a warm weather boxer, and, besides, he wants to give the cut on his head an opportunity to heal properly before he exposes himself to further ring fire. But he is far from through and still considers himself the best fighter of his weight in these parts and will be ready to take on all of the Brignollas, Scellos, Saylors, et al., when the fall days roll around. Meanwhile he will live on the profits of the California trek under the able protection of the aforementioned Mr. Luque Carney, who is his acting-manager, chief second and able, yea, most able, spokesman. I thank you.

TOM TO RESUME WORK.

FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 14.—(AP.)—Refreshed by a 24-hour lay-off, Tom Heeney will resume boxing tonight, working out under the glare of lights.

The ring is in a field adjoining the barn in which he does his bag punching, shadow boxing and other gymnasium exercises, in preparation for his battle with Gene Tunney.

Rain, which started falling early in the morning and did not let up until nearly dusk, forced Heeney to suspend all training activity yesterday. He did not move out of his quarters until night, when he went to Long Branch, N. J.

Edna Irene Jackson, held by her aunt, Mildred McMasters, was one of the youngest Orangemen when the International Orange Association picnicked at Kennywood.

ANNIVERSARY

Lorenz Kipp, general chairman, was popular—at least with Elizabeth Conn, Agnes A. Kipp, granddaughter, and Eleanor Hannach. The outing observed the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Universal Ladies' Loyal Orange Association also attended the outing.

LOYAL ORANGE

At the same time, Loyal Orange Order of Western Pennsylvania picnicked at West View Park in observance of the 238th anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Mary Scott and Sara McAnary tried bag-piping.

HELEN SHEATS

It is not, of course, her regular task, but Helen Sheats undertook to direct the Kiltie Band. Members of the band thought she did so quite capably. At both parks, Orangemen held programs of varied events, including athletics. At West View, William D. Poole was chairman of the outing, an annual affair.

Make Pittsburgh Airplane Center, Air Tourists' Aim

EASTERN TRIP SPURS CITY'S BOOSTERS

MONTAUK, L. I., N. Y., July 14.—Commander Richard E. Byrd, whose thrilling narrative "Skyward" is being published in The Sun-Telegraph, told more than 100 Pittsburgh business men at a banquet here last night that airplane travel can be made safer than automobile transportation. He described his plans for an air expedition to the Antarctic zone, where, he said, there is a continent with an area equal to that of the United States and Mexico.

Other speakers were Clarence Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier; Jack Harding, world flier; Arthur Goebel, Dole air race winner; Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, president of Colonial Airways, Inc.; Sherman Fairchild, president, and Maj. Talbot Freeman, vice president, of the Fairchild Airplane Manufacturing Company.

The Pittsburghers will leave for home late today on their special train. They are enthusiastic over the possibilities of aviation and determined to make Pittsburgh not only a great airport but also a center of airplane manufacture. They visited a number of aviation fields and factories today and yesterday.

The purpose of the tour is to put Pittsburgh prominently on the air map.

FINED $25 FOR FLIRTING

John Andrews, of 806 Duquesne way, was fined $25 by Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court today for flirting with Miss Edna Baux, Mrs. Bertha Stamak and Miss Emma Smith, all of the North Side. Andrews encountered the three women in front of Miss Baux's house yesterday. They testified they ignored his efforts to start a flirtation. Andrews reported to the North Side police the women had stolen his ring worth $8,000. The police arrested all four.

Andrews told Magistrate Brandon he was drunk. He insisted the women stole a ring from him, but reduced its value to $80. Brandon ignored the larceny charge.

Mitchell Defeated After Hard Struggle for Bureau of Air

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd first trained for a seafaring profession, but later turned his interests to an aviation career. He has described the dangers of pioneer flying and the crash of the America. During the war he was assigned to establish an air unit at Halifax, N. S. He describes the adventures of the fliers, who for the first time in history, crossed the Atlantic Ocean by air. He advocates the creation of Bureau of Aeronautics in the Navy Department.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Gen. Mitchell Suspended From Army

CHAPTER XIII.

THE fight was won in the nick of time. Gen. Mitchell had been getting stronger every day. Tirelessly he was working for his one pet idea, that would put army and navy aviation under the control of another department of the government.

Some day, when flying is very far advanced over what it is today, such a service may be justified. But, despite the wonders of aviation, airplane units are just as closely wrapped up with the Navy today as are units of battleships or destroyers or submarines.

To be fully competent, officers of each must be intimate with the problems and tasks of officers of all the others. To create a separate air force just now would be to set up a force of officers and men that would tend to lose touch with what constitutes a well-handled naval action on the high seas. As a result

Revised freight rates to Southwestern points, giving Pittsburgh shippers advantages they never enjoyed before, went into effect today.

The new rates, affecting shipments to Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana, were to have been effective July 8, but were held up by the petition of certain Southern manufacturers for an injunction. The injunction has been dismissed and the rates were put into effect today.

BELOW BUFFALO

As an example of the way in which Pittsburgh benefits it was stated that under the old rates, Buffalo and Pittsburgh shippers paid the same tariffs on consignments of certain products to Southwestern points, notwithstanding that the haul from Buffalo is considerably longer. Under the new schedule the rates from Buffalo are higher than those from Pittsburgh.

FRIEND OF YOURS?

Say, do you know that fellow who stands on your nearest corner? And that fellow you drive past every morning and every evening on the way to the office? They are "traffic cops" and mighty bright fellows to those who know them. Today The Sun-Telegraph presents another in its series and Monday will give his name. Speak to him!

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS CHARLES MADINE, MARRIED, 1536 BELASCO AVENUE, BEECHVIEW, WHO WORKS AT CARSON STREET AND BROWNSVILLE ROAD. FOUR OF HIS 18 YEARS OF SERVICE HAVE BEEN SPENT IN THE TRAFFIC DIVISION.

Will Rogers Says

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 14.

See where Tammany Hall has told her boys to work at home where their line is understood. They are taking no chance on it being a liability.

See where Peggy Hopkins is going to marry an Englishman. If nationalities hold out, Peggy ought to have quite a future as the bride of all nations.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY!! THRILLS! ADVENTURE! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L PACKARD

Bob Tries to Make a Bargain With Chen-Shu To Save Verna

"IS THAT so!" he raged. "Well, blimy, I'll make the rest of it short enough! Me and Chen-shu and Won Fu here had a confab. You'd showed one of the idols here. From the shore we kept watch on the Alita. We didn't know where Mindar Singh had gone—but we caught him when he swam ashore just before daylight. Savvy that?

"And Mindar Singh squealed—because he had to. And we took the two idols from him, but one of the ciphers was a fake—and you faked it. It wouldn't work out, and it wasn't the same paper, and it wasn't the same writing. And then Won Fu saw the girl come ashore from another schooner, and Chen-shu said you was sweet on each other and the rest was easy. Maybe you've heard that Java Dick don't take chances when there's a sure bet? Well, I wasn't taking any chances! 'Go to hell!' says you to the polite invitation to come across with what we wants—and dies! I know your kind! I've seen 'em! But you don't talk that way when your girl goes with you! That's short and sweet, ain't it? You know now why she's here. You tell us where that paper of Hsi Yen's is, or what we'll do to her before your eyes'll make you sick, and afterwards we'll attend to you! You got it straight, ain't you? Now what do you say—and say it quick!"

There was a new movement in the room—an uneasy, restless, excited movement. The ring of faces seemed to Bob Kingsley to be edging in upon him from all sides. They all looked alike, those faces. In all of them was the greed that Hsi Yan so artfully had played upon with his Machiavellian touch. It glittered in the narrow eyes; it showed in the distended nostrils, and the slightly parted lips—and behind the greed, uglier still, was a deadly menace. His eyes swept the circle, and rested on one face that seemed even more threatening than any of the others. The man with the crutch had thrust himself suddenly forward, and now was laughing tonelessly.

CHAPTER LI.

IT was only a second that had passed, wasn't it?—but they were already displaying an impatience that was threatening enough to have grown out of hours of fruitless waiting. He had destroyed it. He could not produce it. And if he refused to tell them what was in it, or even pretended that he did not know, any reason for his further existence, and Verna's in Chen-shu's eyes was gone, and the end would come here and now. He could not take that stand—it would be madness! Likewise, it would be suicidal to let them know that Captain Scarface, or anyone else, had already gone after the treasure. What, then? He was left with only one alternative. He must admit enough to make his life appear valuable to them—while he sparred for time. That was the only thing he could do!

He faced Java Dick and Chen-shu abruptly.

"I dare say you're right," he said steadily. "There's no good lying about it. I took the genuine cipher out of the idol, and I faked the other one. That's true—but it's also true that I tore up the genuine one and that I haven't got it."

Java Dick sucked in his breath sibilantly.

Chen-shu's eyes grew narrower, his oily smile broader.

"Why should the High Eminence, whose wisdom I have extolled, proclaim himself a fool?" he inquired reproachfully.

Bob Kingsley forced a cool smile. He was staggering mentally—trying to chart his way with nothing to guide him—afraid to say too little, or too much, in his effort to secure a respite if even for no more than tonight alone. That was his only chance for the moment—a respite. With time, something might happen. The phrase kept pounding at his brain. With time, something might happen.

"You haven't heard me out," he answered. "I told you I destroyed the cipher—and I did. But didn't say that I hadn't translated it. I did translate it. You know that Mindar Singh gave me the key to it last night, since you say you forced the truth out of him."

"And we'll force more than that out of him, too, before we're through!" gritted Java Dick. "All right, my lad, you seem to be getting a bit of a glimmer of sense. The paper don't matter 'cause if it's torn up, nobody else gets it. What we're asking you now is where it said the treasure was that Hsi Yan found?"

Bob Kingsley hesitated an instant—then he plunged boldly.

"If I tell you, you will let Miss Lyle there go?" he demanded.

"Sure!" agreed Java Dick almost too readily.

"And you?" Bob Kingsley turned to Chen-shu.

"That, Heaven-Born," replied Chen-shu affably, "embodies all my desires."

Bob Kingsley smiled grimly. What good did it do him to prove them liars? He knew it already! But there was just the slim chance, not one in a million, that his proposal might work.

"Very well, then," he said. "I'll tell you what I'll do. You can fix the details to suit yourselves. I don't care how you do it. Take us in a car if you like, so that you can drive away with me afterwards without running any risk of being caught. But let me see Miss Lyle enter the door of any Englishman's house here in Singapore that she selects, and I'll tell you where Hsi Yan's treasure is."

"The distrust that is in the Heaven-Born's heart," observed Chen-shu smoothly, "begats distrust even in so humble a person as myself. Does the Heaven-Born forget why the maiden was brought here?"

"But you would still have me in your power," returned Bob Kingsley plausibly. "If I didn't keep my word, you would have me where you wanted me."

"Not on your life!" scowled Java Dick. "I told you before I knew your kind. You'd go out with a grin if you felt life it, a sure bet! You don't come none sure bet! You don't come none of that stuff!"

Bob Kingsley's hands returned you play straight, you and the again. It was an impasse!

"Well, what do you propose, then?" he asked evenly.

"Propose!" Java Dick guffawed mockingly. "I ain't proposing nothing! But I tell you what you're going to do, and what we're going to do. You're going to tell us where the loot is, and then you're going to take us there, and the girl's going along so's to make sure you don't lost your blarsted memory at the last minute. And if you try any game at giving us the wrong steer you can figure for yourself what this crowd'll do first to the girl and then to you. Come on, now, let's have it! If you play straight, you and the girl go free."

"Yes," agreed Chen-shu amiably, "the Heaven-Born has only to bring us to the treasure, and after that it shall be as Java Dick has said."

A lie like the first, of course! Bob Kingsley glanced toward the door. Verna was still there, but he could not see her face. There were too many of these leering henchmen of Chen-shu crowded in between them now. A lie—but it meant a few days' respite. A respite was what he was striving for! Something might happen in that time. Should he tell them the truth—or lead them on a fool's errand? He might gain an extra day or two by naming a locality further away than Luala; and, besides, Capt. Scarface was at Luala, and, outnumbered two to one, might fall into their hands.

He was suddenly conscious that Chen-shu was smiling ironically.

"If the Heaven-Born is tempted to an imaginary tale," observed Chen-shu sweetly, "let the Heaven-Born remember that on the voyage in which Hsi Yan found the treasure all here except Java Dick were on the junk with Hsi Yan, and that it is known to us at what places he paid visits to the land."

Bob Kingsley smiled in return. The thrust had gone home—but there was no reason why Chen-shu should know it! His hand was forced now—there was no alternative. Verna came before Scarface—and Scarface would be the first to have it that way; and, besides, it did not mean that Scarface, even if found at Luala, would necessarily be overtaken by disaster; Scarface was no fool, he had his wits about him, and the Iola as a possible means of escape. He, Bob Kingsley, did know where Hsi Yan had been on that voyage—except one place. If he attempted to mislead them and guessed wrong—Verna would pay.

"Hsi Yan's cipher said Luala," he answered.

There was a sudden, eager glitter in Chen-shu's eyes.

"It is true that Hsi Yan made land at Luala," he said. "Likewise, I remember where he landed. What, then, O Heaven-Born?"

Again Bob Kingsley achieved a smile—for again his hand was forced.

"The cipher referred to a creek," he said.

Chen-shu nodded.

"That also is true," he agreed. "And then?"

Bob Kingsley shrugged his shoulders. Luala and the creek! With that much known, he gained nothing by attempting to conceal the rest.

"A half-mile up the creek, according to the cipher," he said, "there's where Hsi Yan called a 'crumbled hillside,' and a burnt tree; and 50 paces west of the tree there's a flat rock. The 'opening,' whatever it may be, is under the flat rock."

Chen-shu abruptly turned to Java Dick and spoke in an undertone—and Bob Kingsley, watching, saw Java Dick nod his head and grin. Then Chen-shu clapped his hands authoritatively.

Again Bob Kingsley looked toward the door. Verna was no longer there. The last in, she was the first gone. The room was emptying. The doorway was crowded with Chinamen chattering excitedly now, and already on the way out.

He had not moved. He did not move now, as Chen-shu, who was the last to go, spoke from the doorway.

'EXIT—THE JUNE BRIDE'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"THE soft, gentle bride" of June! Her little play is over, as far as the audience is concerned. The critic, at THIS play, usually a lady in mauve and platinum fox, has eaten her bridal bit of cake and gone her way. The artist, sent by his editor, has shuffled his sheets, hoped his face hadn't gotten too smudged, sighed at the prospect of sitting up half the night to get his "pic" of the heroine in next day's paper, and hopped on the subway. The pages and flower girls, their velvet pea jackets and ballet skirts folded away, are already almost an inch taller, and will never wear them—the jackets and frocks—again. The orange blossoms, still headily sweet, already holding the unborn memories that are to be some day—happy ones, or sad ones, which?—in their drying sweetness, are put away between the glazed leather and petit-point engagement book of the bride. The flower from the groom's buttonhole is tucked away and sealed, man-fashion, in a plain envelope with the words scrawled across, from his sentimental heart—"the flower I wore at my wedding, June the ——— nineteen twenty-eight." Her mother and father are wandering around a lonely house and going out a great deal—learning to dance, even, all over again. HIS mother misses her boy that the "soft and gentle bride" has stolen away. DON'T blame her, Boy's-Mother. Blame Love, Eros the treacherous, Venus' runaway son. He and he alone is at the bottom of it all. The veil, the pretty wedding-frock, folded by a pair of white hands, looked down upon by a pair of lovely eyes, is shut away with the wish that there will be a little child to show them to some day. The curtain is down. The stage littered with flowers still unswept. In fact, to the world the play is over. Exit the June Bride. To all the world save the bride herself.

But not, oh NOT, to her! Somewhere, where she is seeing the world alone with the one she loves, crowded off the news sheets, she is still a June Bride. THAT was only the prologue. For her the enthralling play has just begun.

Off the boards of the papers perhaps. But not off Love's Daily!—NELL BRINKLEY.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Lillian Decides to Delay Taking Further Action

WHEN Lillian concluded her diatribe against Dicky, I found myself possessed of an odd little conviction that she was purposely exaggerating her reaction to his refusal to enlighten her concerning the identity of the red-bearded man, and that she was doing it for my benefit. I know her every inflection, and I was sure that instead of camping on the doorstep of the mysterious Transvanian, as she had threatened, she meant to keep as far away from him as possible.

For some reason of her own she was engaged in the time-honored custom of exhibiting a red herring for my inspection, and I promptly humored her by treating her suggestion with a lightness which I hoped would camouflage my real interest and curiosity concerning the queer inhabitants of the shack back of the farmhouse.

"Don't let Katie hear you say that," I warned her, laughing. "She'll have the local fire department, also the state constabulary trailing you to be sure that you won't be kidnaped. She has those men filed away in her mind as members of a dangerous band of cr-r-ooks, with every 'r' sounded."

"Poor Katie!" she returned with a grim little smile. "Some day one of those prognostications of hers is going to come true, and then our Katie will be no more. She'll spontaneously combust from excitement. Well, except for watching my chance to talk to that man in the shack, there's nothing I can do on this picture puzzle this week until Phil gets back and we have that beach picnic. I want to find out what's in the back of that lad's mind before I make very many more moves on the chess board. You don't plan to see your prize pupil again before the picnic, do you?"

"No. As I told you, she isn't coming for a lesson again until next Tuesday."

"Wonder how she's going to square that with Phil. I suppose, though, that will fit in with his plan of souring her upon the stage career. But this posing for Dicky—Look here, did you notice that it was not until Phil left that Miss Lincoln asked for Dicky's address, and telephoned him?"

I stared at her with slowly dawning comprehension.

"You mean—"

"I mean that the young woman is not accustomed to being crossed in her whims, and that Phil in some way made it pretty plain to her that he did not wish her to sit for those sketches. Probably outlined his rule of not having any publicity for his stars. But she's crazy to pose for Dicky, and once having found out from you that Harding's books in all probability would never reach Europe, she determined to take the chance while Phil is gone to the city. Not knowing our adamant Phil, she figures that by the time the book is published and he finds it out, he will have forgotten all about his prohibition. But I'll lay you five to one, first that she'll hurry up those sketches so they'll be all over before Phil gets back, and second that you'll hear a twitter from the Dicky-bird upon the subject of keeping your knowledge of the sketches to yourself."

"I'll not take you, even at those odds," I told her smiling.

"Piker!" she threw at me, and then rose, stretching her arms high above her head.

"I'm going to call it a day," she said. "Goodnight."

"Goodnight," I returned and curled down in the couch hammock, my refuge when I am tired and troubled.

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 15

SUNDAY'S Horoscope shows great literary and social activity, with the prospect of change or travel. It would be well to guard against accident or loss while traveling. Church or mystical matters should flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may make a sudden move, change or journey during the year, but they are urged to take every precaution against accident or loss. Personal affairs may be pleasant and should flourish.

A child born on this day may be versatile and accomplished, and should make a successful diplomat, or with large and secret organizations where tact is required.

The more I study nature the more I stand amazed at the work of the Creator.—PASTEUR.

Monday, July 16

MONDAY'S reading is favorable for new enterprises and finances but holds a rather ominous hint of an unexpected change or journey which may not be beneficial. Fairly unusual or eccentric conditions prevail, especially in social activities.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the threshold of a year of change with probable unexpected journeys. Discretely managed, there may be financial success and social affairs may bring pleasure.

A child born on this day may be active and energetic and should make a success financially as well as with its social activities.

I pray while I am engaged in my work in the laboratory.—PASTEUR.

Will Third Round of Stock Battle End Differently?

By B. C. FORBES

THE battle has been renewed between daring stock market operators and the Federal Reserve authorities. Which will win this third round?

The first round was won by the speculators. They paid little attention to the raising of the official rediscount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent. The second round was not wholly one-sided; but the Wall Street gentlemen, after a jolt, again got things going their way.

My guess is that this third round will have a somewhat different ending.

Presumably the Chicago and New York 5 per cent rate will be adopted all over the country. The move is aimed directly at stock market borrowing. Brokers' loans have reclimbed almost to their highest peak. Meanwhile the Federal Reserve banks have been drawn upon more and more heavily by borrowers.

Just as cheap money brought the speculative boom, dear money threatens to bring its doom.

The writer mentioned recently that he was willing to wait before loading up with stocks. The market's severe break suggests that this attitude was not quite so ridiculous as some of our bullish friends pictured it. The danger of waiting increases, of course, as the market sinks lower and lower. But it appears doubtful that the bottom for the year has yet been reached.

THAT cautious statement should be followed up by this one: A member of an important New York Stock Exchange house tells me that customers have acted very differently from former years in regard to high interest charges attached to the statements sent them by brokers. In the old days brokers were flooded with protests when they charged stiff rates on unpaid balances.

"Our complaints now have averaged only one-half of one per cent," said this broker, "and from what I gather from other houses their experiences have been similar. The response to margin calls all through this market also has been away ahead onf anything ever before known. It seems reasonable to draw the deduction that those who have been buying stocks are well fortified financially, and that they have such confidence in their holdings that an additional interest charge doesn't bother them."

FROM influential private sources come very significant advices concerning coming developments of a helpful nature in California's oil industry. The intimations are that the long-delayed recovery in oil will start there shortly and prove of substantial benefit to stockholders. Certainly it is to be hoped that California will be able to show other oil territories how to start moving towards a more stable and satisfactory state.

IN the East all talk of the possibility of a third political party being organized is laughed at. In some sections the talk is less ridiculed. From a responsible Minnesota reader comes this regarding political dissatisfaction:

"Contrary to the specifications of the Easterners, there are a great many weapons in the hands of the agriculturalists which they could use most effectively, such as effecting a coalition with the eastern laborites and adopting a policy of obstruction to the carrying on of executive policies. Those things would be drastic in their effects, but I am very much afraid at the present it is a result which must ultimately come from the present existing conditions."

GOOD news! A. Klotzman, Jr., general manager of the May Oil Burner Corporation, Baltimore, after referring to the writer's championing of vacations for workers, says: "I wish to advise you that this corporation has arranged to give its factory employes a one week paid vacation. Having established this precedent, we hope to continue it throughout our career."

FROM a railway workman, N. Jenen: "Your recent statement about it being assumed by many that the entire Catholic vote would go to Al Smith should not go unchallenged. I am a Catholic in daily contact with others of my faith, including clergymen, Knights of Columbus, etc., and I find no such intention on their part. No Catholic is urged to vote for any particular candidate no matter what his religion. My vote will be for Hoover, as will be the votes of many Catholics."

The campaign may yield more than one surprise.

At present the betting in Wall street, I am told, is 2½ or 3 to 1 on Hoover.

DUPONT GAINS IN GENERAL ADVANCE

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP.)—The recovery in stock prices which set in yesterday, was resumed at the opening of today's market.

Dupont showed an initial gain of 5 points and Sears Roebuck, Radio, Atlantic Refining and United States Steel common advanced a point or so. General Electric fell back a point.

Short covering operations by traders who had sold stocks earlier in the week were an important factor in the early buying movement. The influx of funds attracted here by the higher money rates apparently helped to revive bullish enthusiasm and keep short selling in check.

A fairly good demand developed for the oil shares in the early trading on reports of heavy gasoline consumption. Atlantic Refining, Indian Refining common and the certificates and a few others advanced a point or so. Houston, which ran up 6 points yesterday, fell back slightly on realizing.

Airplane issues again attracted an outside following with both Wright and Curtiss climbing more than a point. International Harvester ran up 3 points and early gains of a point or so were recorded by Davison Chemical, Victor Talking Machine and Kroger Stores.

General Motors moved within a narrow range. International Nickel and American Home Products were heavy.

Foreign exchanges opened easier, with sterling cables quoted around $4.86⅛.

TOT FALLS TWO FLOORS, RECOVERY HELD LIKELY

FREEDOM, Pa., July 14.—Falling to the ground from a third floor fire escape landing on the Freedom National Bank Building, Hubert Craig, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Craig, broke his left leg and was cut on the face. He is in the Rochester General Hospital and probably will recover. The Craig family lives in an apartment in the building.

LOCAL PRICES UNCHANGED

The week-end sessions were unusually quiet in both the New York and Pittsburgh markets, with trading on the exchange here being confined to about a half dozen issues and the prices showing practically no change from the levels prevailing on the close last night.

Arkansas Gas and Lone Star were the only issues appearing on the Fourth avenue board during the first hour. The latter displayed a firm tone around $53 a share while Arkansas was a little unsteady and fell below the $3 figure at which it has been pegged for several weeks. Demand for Lone Star is being maintained in expectation of merger developments later on which may place the company under control of Columbia Gas & Electric. It is confidently expected by Lone Star's friends that such deal, if consummated, will be negotiated on favorable terms for the Lone Star stockholders and that a stock dividend may be declared before any exchange into Columbia takes place. Lone Star has sufficient authorized stock to distribute a 25 per cent melon to the shareholders and, whether or not the Columbia deal goes through, it is the opinion in many quarters here that a stock distributon of some sort will be made.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Atlanta Raises Bank Rate.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta has established a rediscount rate of 5 per cent, effective today. This center had been on a 4½ per cent basis. The Atlanta bank is the fourth in the past few days to raise its rate. The Chicago bank was the first to take the step, followed by New York and Richmond.

Steel Outlook Good—Schwab.

"The U. S. is enjoying a real wave of prosperity in the steel industry, which will continue for some time to come," said Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, at Moundsville, W. Va., yesterday while inspecting the plant of the United Zinc Smelting Company, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem. "The steel industry is just coming into its own and the demand for all kinds of steel products will keep the plants busy for many months," said the steel man.

Trade Volume Above Nodmal.

Dun's Weekly Trade Review says: "It remains a distinguishing feature that the normal summer contraction of business is less marked in some quarters now than is usual at this period. Conspicuous vigor in commercial operations invariably is the exception in mid-July, yet the volume in certain basic lines has been better sustained this month than was commonly expected. A few branches reflect activity that is not being experienced everywhere, but their bearing on the public purchasing power and on conditions generally is constructive. Sentiment has been favorably affected by a larger gain in unfilled steel orders than was anticipated and the textile division discloses signs of additional gains. Continued high temperatures over much of the country naturally have quickened retail distribution of seasonable goods, reducing stocks and necessitating some buying for replenishment, and the latest report of railroad freight traffic makes a better comparison with the movement a year ago. The status of the principal crops, although disappointing in some respects, has improved recently and nothing in the current agricultural or mercantile situation is analagous to the renewed depression in the stock market.

"Weekly bank clearings, $10,209,277,000, an increase of 10.7 per cent over a year ago."

HAMILTON GETS SENATE JOB

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 14.—(AP.)—A. Boyd Hamilton, secretary to Gov. Fisher, was appointed secretary to the State Senate yesterday, and Frank J. Gorman, Philadelphia, was named to succeed him. Both appointments are effective August 1.

Hamilton takes up the mantle of W. Harry Baker, who died a year ago, after serving since 1911. The position is regarded as most important because of its contacts with political leaders and the power and influence which naturally accrues.

Hamilton's appointment was made at Allentown by Senator Horace W. Schantz, of Lehigh, president pro tempore of the Senate. The problem of filling the vacancy caused by Baker's death had been a vexing one.

Hamilton had been engaged in writing news of Capitol Hill for many years prior to his appointment as secretary to Gov. Fisher. Gorman, another newspaperman, also became an officeholder under the Fisher administration. Gov. Fisher expressed keen regret at Hamilton's departure from his office.

O'Hara at New Kensington and on June 30 left his employ, taking with her a $500 diamond ring and another worth $50, which she later turned over to Faust at his request. They have been held for court.

Broadcast Appeal Of Dying Mother Reaches Son

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP.)—A radio message last night recalled Walter Smith Gibbons, 34, of Elizabeth, N. J., from Morrisville, Pa., to the bedside of his mother, reported dying, in Elizabeth.

At the request of Elizabeth police, station officials said, station WOR put on the air a message telling of the mother's serious illness. Gibbons had been away from home for two weeks and his relatives did not know his whereabouts.

A short time later the station received a telegram from Gibbons at Morrisville, saying: "Listening in. Radio message regarding mother's illness received. On way home."

MENACED BRIDE OF WEALTHY YOUTH GUARDED

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

A LARGE potential output and a well developed organization, embracing every phase of activity from the production of crude oil to the marketing of refined products, has been built up by the Transcontinental Oil Company. In spite of this, operations were at a loss in 1927 and further losses have been shown this year due to the unsettled state of the industry.

When conditions in the business as a whole turn for the better, the company will be in a position to show earnings in proportion to the improvement of its properties.

TRANSCONTINENTAL suffered heavy losses for several years following its organization, but in 1925 a profit of $792,280 was shown after all charges including interest, depreciation and depletion.

In 1926, largely as the result of successful drilling in the Nigger Creek field of Limestone county, Tex., profit was increased to $1,209,303, which was equivalent to two cents a share on the 3,742,029 shares of common stock after deducting dividend requirements on the $15,750,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock.

IN 1927, output of crude oil continued to grow with big strikes in Pecos county, Tex., and in the Seminole field in Oklahoma. World-wide over-production of crude and sharp drops in prices nullified the advantages of greater production so that a net loss of $1,380,146 was reported last year. This was after deducting interest, depreciation and the cost of dry holes and abandoned leases. No mention was made of charges for depletion in the 1927 annual report. In the first quarter of this year a net loss of $70,646 was shown.

AT PRSEENT Transcontinental has an actual production of about 12,000 barrels a day from 373 wells.

Its great potential output is in the Yates Pool in Pecos county, Tex. The company owns jointly with the Mid-Kansas Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Ohio Oil Company, leases covering about 9,600 acres. At this point 69 producing wells have been completed. The oil has been pinched in awaiting transportation facilities.

Transcontinental's share of the expected production will be over 300,000 barrels a day based on official field pro-ration test gauges.

Only a small proportion of the available oil in this field is now being moved over pipe lines. The refinery runs and laboratory tests show an unusually high content of the qualities for anti-knock gasoline.

IN ADDITION to the wells now producing in the Yates Pool 500 proven locations have been made for future drilling. The oil is found at a depth of only 1,100 feet so that drilling costs are low. One estimate has placed the total of Transcontinental's share from this pool at 100,000,000 barrels of oil.

THE company has just refunded its bonded debt at a lower rate of interest and has liquidated bank loans by the public offering of $12,000,000 of first mortgage 10-year 6½ per cent bonds. Each $1,000 bond carries detachable warrants entitling the holder to purchase 20 shares of the common stock on or before July 1, 1929, at $9 a share or at higher prices on subsequent dates.

The stock closed yesterday at 7⅝. Its high for this year was 10⅛ and the low 6¼. It is entirely possible that these warrants may be of value in the future.

THE new issue of bonds permitted the retirement of $1,736,000 of 7 per cent gold notes. The new issue appears to have been sold to the bankers at a large discount since deferred items on the balance sheet of April 1, 1928, after giving effect to the new financing, amounted to $1,560,178 compared with only $263,531 on January 1, 1928.

THE physical properties are valued at $47,250,116 on the balance sheet, after charging off depreciation of $1,489,954. An appraisal made shortly before the new financing placed the value of these properties at $65,000,000.

THE company has benefited by a decision of the Supreme Court of Texas handed down June 25 on litigation on certain leases which the company had bought. The favorable ruling makes it possible for the company to make use of gross earnings of $499,545 made from the leases involved.

A VERY substantial improvement in earnings must be shown before they can be made available for the common stock. Preferred dividends have been in arrears since April 1, 1924.

SLEEP OUTSIDE, GOODS SOLD

Accused of having left his wife and small children, John King, 37, of 611 White street, McKeesport, was held for court yesterday on a charge of neglect and abandonment of minor children by Justice of the Peace J. J. Lundy of McKeesport. Agents of the Humane Society who prosecuted said the family had been forced to sleep on the porch of their home without bed clothing, their furniture having been sold for debt. The wife and an infant daughter are at the Salvation Army home in McKeesport and two older children are being cared for by juvenile court attaches.

SKYWARD

By COMMANDER RICHARD E. BYRD

there would be lost that fine naval co-ordination which from the days of Nelson has stood for victory.

Wins Congress Support

Mitchell got busy on his plan right after the war. All the time we were struggling for a Bureau of Air he was winning one supporter after another in Congress. Most regular Navy officers paid very little attention to what he was doing. They were not interested enough in aviation then to care much whether it was taken away from the navy or not.

As early as 1919 Mitchell got a hearing for his bill before the Military Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives. The few naval officers who intelligently testified against the bill were impugned as having been swayed against it by insidious propaganda or outright intimidation.

I remember once testifying in a hot session that nearly broke up in a fist fight. Commander Callan, of the reserves, followed me on the stand. An ex-Army aviator happened to be chairman of the subcommittee before which we stood. Callan fiercely opposed Mitchell's plan. In refutation of a point that had previously been made by Maj. Faulois about an Army aviator he made a startling statement.

"That aviator, I happened to know," declared Callan bluntly, "was removed from his post in Europe for incompetency."

"That aviator" happened to be the chairman before whom we testified. Instantly the fireworks began. The impugned Congressman shook his finger in Callan's face. "You're a liar!" he shouted. "And a coward! You haven't the guts to do what you ought to do the minute this meeting is over."

Having been a boxing enthusiast at Annapolis, I concluded that I would soon have the fun of participating as second in an old-fashioned fight.

But I soon discovered that this sort of thing was just part of the political game. After a bit the rumpus calmed down, "ill-chosen" remarks were expunged from the record and the hearing went on as if nothing had happened.

Clause in Bill

From that time until 1925, when Gen. Mitchell was suspended from the Army, hearing after hearing was held in Congress to determine the justice of his claims. As early as 1920 he declared that the Army would take over all the Navy's coastal air patrol stations. He even managed to get a clause to this effect inserted in the Army appropriation bill. The lethargic conservatives in the Navy Department only half waked up.

I was given the job of getting this clause out of the bill. Senator Wadsworth, of New York, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, agreed to handle the thing for the Navy. Then I took to my bed with another bad attack of influenza. One day as I lay in bed I telephoned Wadsworth to check up.

"Sorry, Byrd," he said, "but the energetic Gen. Mitchell has already been around to see all the other members of my committee and they now side with him."

Without bothering to ask the doctor, I hopped out of bed, hurried to the Navy Department, where I got a letter from the Secretary of the Navy to the Senate and orders to represent him.

Then I made the round of the Naval Committee members just as Mitchell had done with the Committee on Naval Affairs. It was only a matter of giving the facts involved.

Clause Up for Debate

When the clause came up on the floor for debate and vote two days later the Navy won, giving me a chance to go back to bed and get well.

All this sounds very simple and easy; just a lot of running around and talking to people. But it was a thankless and nearly always misunderstood job.

By some of my shipmates I was looked on as "politician," a term of mild contempt in the Navy. Many thought I was grinding my own ax. Not a few came to the conclusion that we naval aviators were after the same thing as Gen. Mitchell, a separate air force, only we wanted to run it ourselves.

I remember one morning finding a Congressman in his office about to blow up. "A great lot of naval officers you've got down there," he answered. "Damn it, they ought to be all sent to sea; That's where they should be anyway!"

As this man had just spent a week fighting the Navy's battles in debate on the floor, I was much concerned. When he calmed down I found he had telephoned the department for some information about a naval officer from his district. With scant courtesy he was referred from one officer to another, and finally cut off altogether.

I got him to let me man the telephone, and in a few minutes had the desired information. Finally I soothed his injured feelings.

When I got back to the department I reported the incident to the admiral who headed the particular bureau that had failed the Congressman.

"Bosh!" exploded the admiral. "Don't you know that Congress is only a damned nuisance?"

Of course, this was an extreme case. But it shows the difficulties and lack of understanding that often exists between the executive and law-making branches of our government. Also it shows some of the barrier of friction that so often slowed the work many were trying to do on behalf of aviation.

Here again knowledge finally made for understanding.

Mitchell did not cease for one moment to try to sink the battleships and bring about a united air-service. But the violence of his attacks and the extent of his activities finally stirred up the high ranking officers of the Navy, whom we young aviators had not been able to influence. Presently we had large reinforcements in rank as well as in numbers.

Fight Finished

The finish fight on the united air service plan came in 1925. I find in a Congressional report part of my testimony before the joint committee of Congress which shows my own views. I quote it here as relevant, although it must be remembered that I was only one of many and my part relatively small.

For 40 centuries—ever since the world has known towns and ships—there have been two objectives in warfare: the towns and the ships. This great division of the armed forces of nations is natural since cities are usually attacked and defeated by armies, and ships are attacked by sea craft.

Cities and ships can now be approached through the air, but the air does not and can not provide for a third objective. Therefore no reason exists for a third division of the armed forces of the country. A city can be bombed, but can not be captured by aircraft. The army must be there to take it. Ships can be bombed, but the ships and their personnel can not be taken prisoner by aircraft. The navy must do that.

There is nothing in the air to attack unless it is put there—then it is only temporarily there. The same is true of the submarine. There can be no objective that exists under the surface of the water to attack except submarines. It does not supply an enemy with a third objective.

Until there is a third objective no reason for a third military department exists.

Our conclusion is clear. Experience has shown beyond peradventure that if the Navy is to reach its maximum war efficiency, it must entirely control its air arm in peace as well as in war.

The forming of a united air service is seen to be so costly that it would place a tremendous financial burden on the country. It would be plain folly, then, to form a department of aeronautics that would not only endanger the effectiveness of our national defense but increase enormously our national yearly expenditure.

Mitchell Court-Martialled

With the whole Navy and half the Army against him, Gen. Mitchell was finally squashed. In the end he was court-martialed for insubordination and suspended from the Army.

I believe he was sincere; but his sincerity was the ruthless pertinacity of a zealot. He did a great deal for aviation, if only by making it a sharp issue before Congress and the country. The valuable appointment of three air secretaries for the Departments of the Army, Navy and Commerce were the direct result of his fight for a separate air service. The trouble was he was 10 to 20 years ahead of aviation.

One result of the fight on Capitol Hill was to increase my loyalty and devotion to the Navy. In spite of the general squareness of Congressmen the Navy was at that time often at the mercy of some member from some state that knew nothing of the sea, while the Navy itself had no defense.

WEATHER AGAIN HALTS DINGER DAUGHERTY TRIP

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 14.—M. R. (Dinger) Daugherty, legless and one-armed pilot, of New Martinsville, W. Va., who hopes to be the first to fly from New York to Rome, was once more delayed from hopping off from the Hill Airport yesterday. He was blocked by low-hanging clouds and poor visibility. The pilot landed here Wednesday after being forced back on his way east by a storm, prior to that he had been delayed at Mt. Pleasant Field by engine trouble.

CAB CHAUFFEUR REPULSED, TRIES GUN

NEW YORK, July 14.—(INS.)—With the aid of police, Frederick B. Johnson, youthful heir to the Palm Olive soap millions, was guarding his bride today against the return of a taxicab driver who stole her $4,000 bracelet and attempted to kill her in their home off Fifth avenue.

Johnson and his wife, each 19, recently returned from a honeymoon which they spent in "hitch hiking" through the South, despite their almost limitless means.

Recently Mrs. Johnson returned from a downtown shopping tour in a taxicab. Upon entering her house, she noted the loss of a platinum bracelet set with three large diamonds, a gift of her mother-in-law.

A few days later she received a telephone call in response to an advertisement. But when Mrs. Johnson asked the speaker to come to the apartment with the bracelet and receive the offered reward, the voice replied:

REJECTS CASH

"I don't want money. I want you. I am the driver of the taxi where you lost the bracelet, and I liked your looks."

The girl warned the man to stay away and hung up the phone. Fearing the taxi driver might attempt to carry out his threat, she ran to the basement trunk room, procured her husband's revolver, which was unloaded, and returned to her apartment just as the doorbell rang.

A small wiry man wearing a chauffeur's cap entered and held the bracelet before her.

"Here it is, honey; you'll get it if you treat me right," he said.

Mrs. Johnson pointed the pistol at the man's face.

"I don't want the bracelet, get out of here," she ordered.

SNATCHES GUN

The driver grappled with her, gained possession of the gun and pressed it against her side.

"I'll give you a minute to decide, then I'll pull the trigger," he said.

"No," she replied. The man pulled the trigger, again and again and threw the revolver away.

"My own's loaded. I'll get it," he told her as she fled from the place.

Ironically, Mrs. Johnson was arrested on a charge of violation of the Sullivan law, because Johnson had only a Virginia permit for possession of a revolver.

Case for Solomon Hinges on Age Of Pet Dog

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 14.—It's a wise dog that knows its owner. Today Frank Petroskey, of Jeannette, and Mrs. Mary Butz, of Greensburg, are both waiting the verdict of a veterinarian on proof of ownership.

Petroskey's white spitz dog disappeared a year ago and he later recovered what he believed was the animal from a Greensburg family. In the meanwhile Mrs. Butz's dog was lost and she learned that Petroskey had found one similar to hers. She had him arrested.

At a hearing before a justice of the peace, the dog was friendly to both of the claimants. Mrs. Butz's dog was a year old and the one lost by Petroskey was nearly three years old. The justice withheld decision pending examination of the dog to determine its age.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

OUTSTANDING features in NBC System broadcasts to be heard over Pittsburgh stations tonight will be concerts by the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and by Goldman's band. The Philharmonic concert, from the Lewisohn Stadium, will go on the air over WCAE at 8:30 o'clock. The Goldman band concert will be heard at the same time over KDKA.

Ganne's "Marche Lorraine" will be played as the opening number in the program by the Goldman Band. This French march will be followed by the overture to Auber's "Masaniello," the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria," excerpts from Wagner's "Lohengrin," Suppe's "Poet and Peasant" overture, Strauss' "A Thousand and One Nights" and Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2." Del Saigers will play an aria from St.-Saens' "Samson et Delila."

At 6 o'clock the Crowder brothers will provide a program over KDKA. One is an engineering student at the University of Pittsburgh and the other a student of music at Carnegie Tech. The Tech student will play the octa tarda, an eight-string instrument similar in tone to a guitar.

"The Wasp," a Russian melodrama by Essex Dane, will be presented by "The Strollers" at 7:30 o'clock over WCAE. The action takes place just after the assassination of the Czar, and "the Wasp" is a woman spy who attempts to take the life of a prominent Russian general. The cast will comprise Gregg Bridges, Vincent Griffen and Mae Sweeny.

MOTORIZED ARMY TO BE TESTED

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP.)—The American Army's first experimental motorized force, which assembled at Fort Leonard Wood July 1 for a 75-day tryout in every phase of work and tactics, will go on dress parade Tuesday for War Department officers, making its first extended march by a 42-mile route to Upper Marlboro, Md.

This organization, which has aroused the interest of foreign armies, will have a marching column about eight miles long and will consist of approximately 256 motorized vehicles and 1,100 men.

It is composed of units of from every branch of the service, making it a miniature motorized army. There are field artillery, ammunition trains, infantry, coast artillery with its anti-aircraft guns, engineers, tank companies, armored car platoons of cavalry, chemical warfare service, signal company and medical detachment.

Every phase of work is being covered in separate periods. The handling of material and personnel, technical methods of approach, methods of concealment from ground and air, and means of diminishing excess noise from the mechanized unit are being studied.

In the attack period, problems include fire support of artillery, the movement of infantry to support tank elements, methods of rapidly advancing machine guns and other infantry weapons, artillery in defense of tanks and use of engineer troops in the advance of motor columns.

The final stage will consist of solutions of assumed situations to test the tactics evolved in all the preceding work.

Some of the motorized equipment is of World War design and construction and in order to keep it fit maintenance sections will service each vehicle once a week, thereby hoping to overcome the handicaps of age.

42ND DIVISION MEETS AGAIN

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—(AP.)—Amid a din of yells, songs and noise-making instruments that matched the tumult of a first-class bombardment, the Forty-second "Rainbow" Division opened its annual reunion in Memorial Hall yesterday.

Welcoming speeches and appointment of committee officers completed the day's official business, but the noise went on unabated.

Mayor Thomas and Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, commanding the Fifth Corps Area, addressed the delegates, who listened with one ear and, with the other, heard more of "Mademoiselle from Armentiers."

Plans for a national auxiliary to the Rainbow Division were approved and the women delegates will organize today.

An informal dance and reception, with reunions at the various unit headquarters, were held last night.

The Ohio unit went on record as requesting the Federal government to co-operate in perpetuating the Rainbow Division by National Guard units.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.
Office of Treasurer of Allegheny County, Room 107 Court House
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.
May 1, 1928.
In pursuance of the 21st section of an Act relating to Allegheny County, approved the 1st day of May, 1861, and of the amendment to said section, approved the 30th day of March, A. D. 1866, I do hereby give notice that the duplicates for the several wards of the cities of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton, boroughs and townships, will be open, and I will be prepared to receive the county, poor, road, bond interest, personal property and park taxes for the year 1928 on May 1st. Said taxes may be paid during the months of May, June and July at 5% discount, during August at face, 10% penalty being added on and after September 1st.
Statements will be furnished promptly upon written request, if given name, location by ward in the cities of Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne or Clairton, or by boroughs or townships. If statement of Personal Property or Occupation Tax is desired, please give street address also.
Use of the mail is advised for requesting statements and in making payments of taxes. Remittance may be made by bank draft, certified check, or postoffice money order (payable to John Francies, County Treasurer), accompanied by stamped and addressed envelope for return of tax statement or receipt.
JOHN FRANCIES, County Treasurer.

WALTER F. CAMPBELL, Attorney-at-Law, 1316 Berger Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.
To Florence Evans, Greetings: In the Orphans' Court of Allegheny County, State of Pennsylvania, No. 436 June Term, 1928. In re petition of Thomas Francis Conlin and Catherine Bertha Conlin, his wife, for adoption of Ruth Evans, a minor female child. To Florence Evans, mother of said minor female child, and all other interested parties: Notice is hereby given that Thomas Francis Colin and Catherine Bertha Conlin, his wife, of 209 Fifteenth avenue, Homestead, Pa., have presented their petition to the above court praying for the adoption of the said Ruth Evans, a minor female child, aged five years, as their child and heir at law for the reason that they have maintained said child at their expense for some time, and that the whereabouts of the mother is unknown, and the court has issued a citation, returnable the 26th day of July, 1928, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., requiring the said parent and all other interested parties to appear and show cause, if any they may have, why the said adoption should not be decreed as prayed for in said petition.

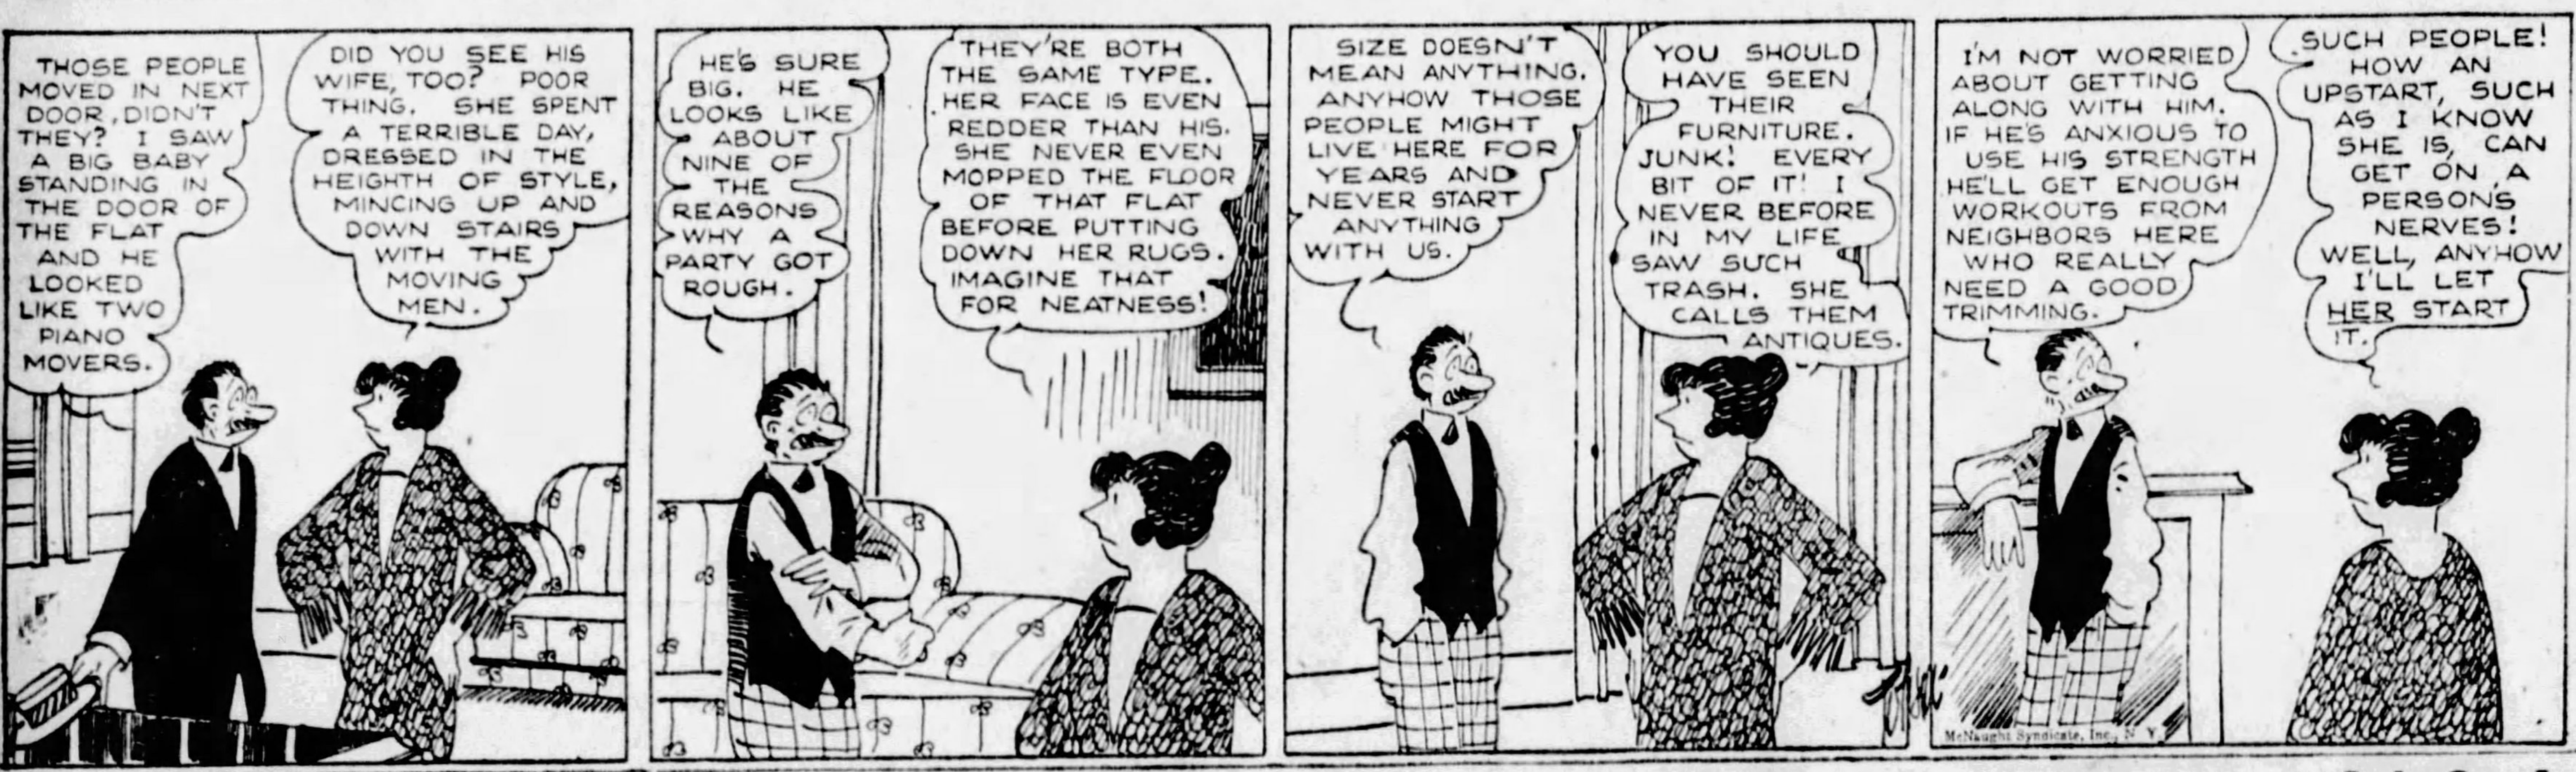
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

Typical Neighbors



THOSE PEOPLE MOVED IN NEXT DOOR, DIDN'T THEY? I SAW A BIG BABY STANDING IN THE DOOR OF THE FLAT AND HE LOOKED LIKE TWO PIANO MOVERS.
DID YOU SEE HIS WIFE, TOO? POOR THING. SHE SPENT A TERRIBLE DAY, DRESSED IN THE HEIGHTH OF STYLE, MINCING UP AND DOWN STAIRS WITH THE MOVING MEN.
HE'S SURE BIG. HE LOOKS LIKE ABOUT NINE OF THE REASONS WHY A PARTY GOT ROUGH.
THEY'RE BOTH THE SAME TYPE. HER FACE IS EVEN REDDER THAN HIS. SHE NEVER EVEN MOPPED THE FLOOR OF THAT FLAT BEFORE PUTTING DOWN HER RUGS. IMAGINE THAT FOR NEATNESS!
SIZE DOESN'T MEAN ANYTHING. ANYHOW THOSE PEOPLE MIGHT LIVE HERE FOR YEARS AND NEVER START ANYTHING WITH US.
YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN THEIR FURNITURE. JUNK! EVERY BIT OF IT! I NEVER BEFORE IN MY LIFE SAW SUCH TRASH. SHE CALLS THEM ANTIQUES.
I'M NOT WORRIED ABOUT GETTING ALONG WITH HIM. IF HE'S ANXIOUS TO USE HIS STRENGTH HE'LL GET ENOUGH WORKOUTS FROM NEIGHBORS HERE WHO REALLY NEED A GOOD TRIMMING.
SUCH PEOPLE! HOW AN UPSTART, SUCH AS I KNOW SHE IS, CAN GET ON A PERSON'S NERVES! WELL, ANYHOW I'LL LET HER START IT.

Doncaster suddenly turned.

Synopsis — Handsome Harry Doncaster, in debt, decided to go to the Zoological Gardens next Sunday in answer to an ad which suggests a tryst with "gent who picked up a lady's glove at Dragoon's ball. We find him in hotel lobby.

HEARING a man's voice, Capt. Doncaster turned as the words, apparently addressed to him, fell upon his ear thus: "It is not the first time I have taken orders from you. Don't you remember Jack Shorncliffe?"

"Oh, yes," replied Doncaster.

"I saw you at the Dragoons' ball," continued Shorncliffe. "By the way, did you note that superb faminine creature? It would be invidious to particularize where all is perfection. But did you glance at her eyes and shoulders? Alabaster is a ridiculous comparison. I should like to know who found her glove."

Harry was angry by this time, although—

Supporters of Blue Law Continue Living in 1794

Despite public sentiment that music is just as exalting and divinely inspired if played on Sunday as any other day, opponents of Sunday symphony concerts here are just as determined as ever to be blind to the fact that we are living in A. D. 1928 and not in 1794. Despite the decision of a local court that Sunday symphony concerts do not violate the law of 1794, and the quashing of their appeal of that decision by the Superior Court, the advocates of a ''blue Sunday'' observance assert they will continue to cause the arrest of anybody participating in a concert similar to that which resulted in the arrest of members of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society.

This is not a question of the constitutionality of the oft-derided law of 1794, but of whether a specific performance actually were in violation of that law. In many attacks the courts have upheld the constitutionality of the blue law and we have to accept its binding and restrictive force. But when the courts decide a symphony concert on the Lord's Day is not a violation of the law, it appears like nothing but persecution for a few persons to persist in an effort to stop the concerts. This savors of a determination to annoy people who would like to live their own lives without interference, granting the strait-laced the same privilege.

The blue law is not a law in behalf of a religious observance of Sunday. It may have been in the day it was written, but now it is in itself a violation of Christian spirit. It has not tended to make Pennsylvania a more Christian state than others, while it has brought upon us the derision and scoffs of those in other places, who pity us and regard us as residents of a benighted region, unaware that the day of Puritanical rigor and severity is long past.

Let the real friends of the Sabbath be better advised than they appear to be. It is not a sin to laugh on Sunday, nor to hear music, nor to play. If they think it is, that is their guide of life to follow, but, in accepting it, they should allow others to follow theirs and not try to force their regime on a protesting and unwilling public at large.

Republican Tweedle Dee—
Democratic Tweedle Dum.

What difference is there between the Democratic and Republican prohibition planks? The Republicans ''reaffirm the attitude of the American people toward the Federal Constitution as declared by Abraham Lincoln.''

Hardly, Lincoln didn't flout and ignore a part of the Constitution that happened not to please him.

The Democratic party ''pledges an honest effort to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment and all laws enacted pursuant thereto,'' meaning the Volstead law.

What is ''an honest effort?'' Put in jail any man that buys from a bootlegger, enabling every bootlegger to blackmail his customers, and you will have something like prohibition, at least among ''the prosperous, respectable class.'' But that isn't what either party wants.

Three Wonderful Sisters
They Offer Consolation to Lonely Girls.

ANN, EMILY AND CHARLOTTE BRONTE,
THREE SISTERS OF EXTRAORDINARY TALENT.

This reproduces an old painting by P. B. Bronte reproduced from "All Alone," a study of the life of Emily Bronte by Roamer Wilson.

In every one of these faces you can see sad experience, years of loneliness, that developed the extraordinary Bronte genius.

The strange careers of the wonderful Bronte sisters remind you of Goethe's saying, "Talent is built in solitude, character in the stream of the world.''

These three Bronte sisters, all wonderfully brilliant women, writers of books and poems, strangely powerful, lived in deepest solitude and often in great sorrow, in their father's lonely house far out on the moor.

"Wuthering Heights," by Emily Bronte, is one of the most mysterious, moving, powerful books ever written by man or woman.

These three sisters, brought up in loneliness and fear, developed talent and power of imagination excelled by few, if any, women.

The lives of the three sisters should comfort many lonely girls willing to accept fame in lieu of girlish happiness.

Whether fame is as important as happiness is for each to decide. They rarely go together.

SUN-TELEGRAPH'S PLATFORM

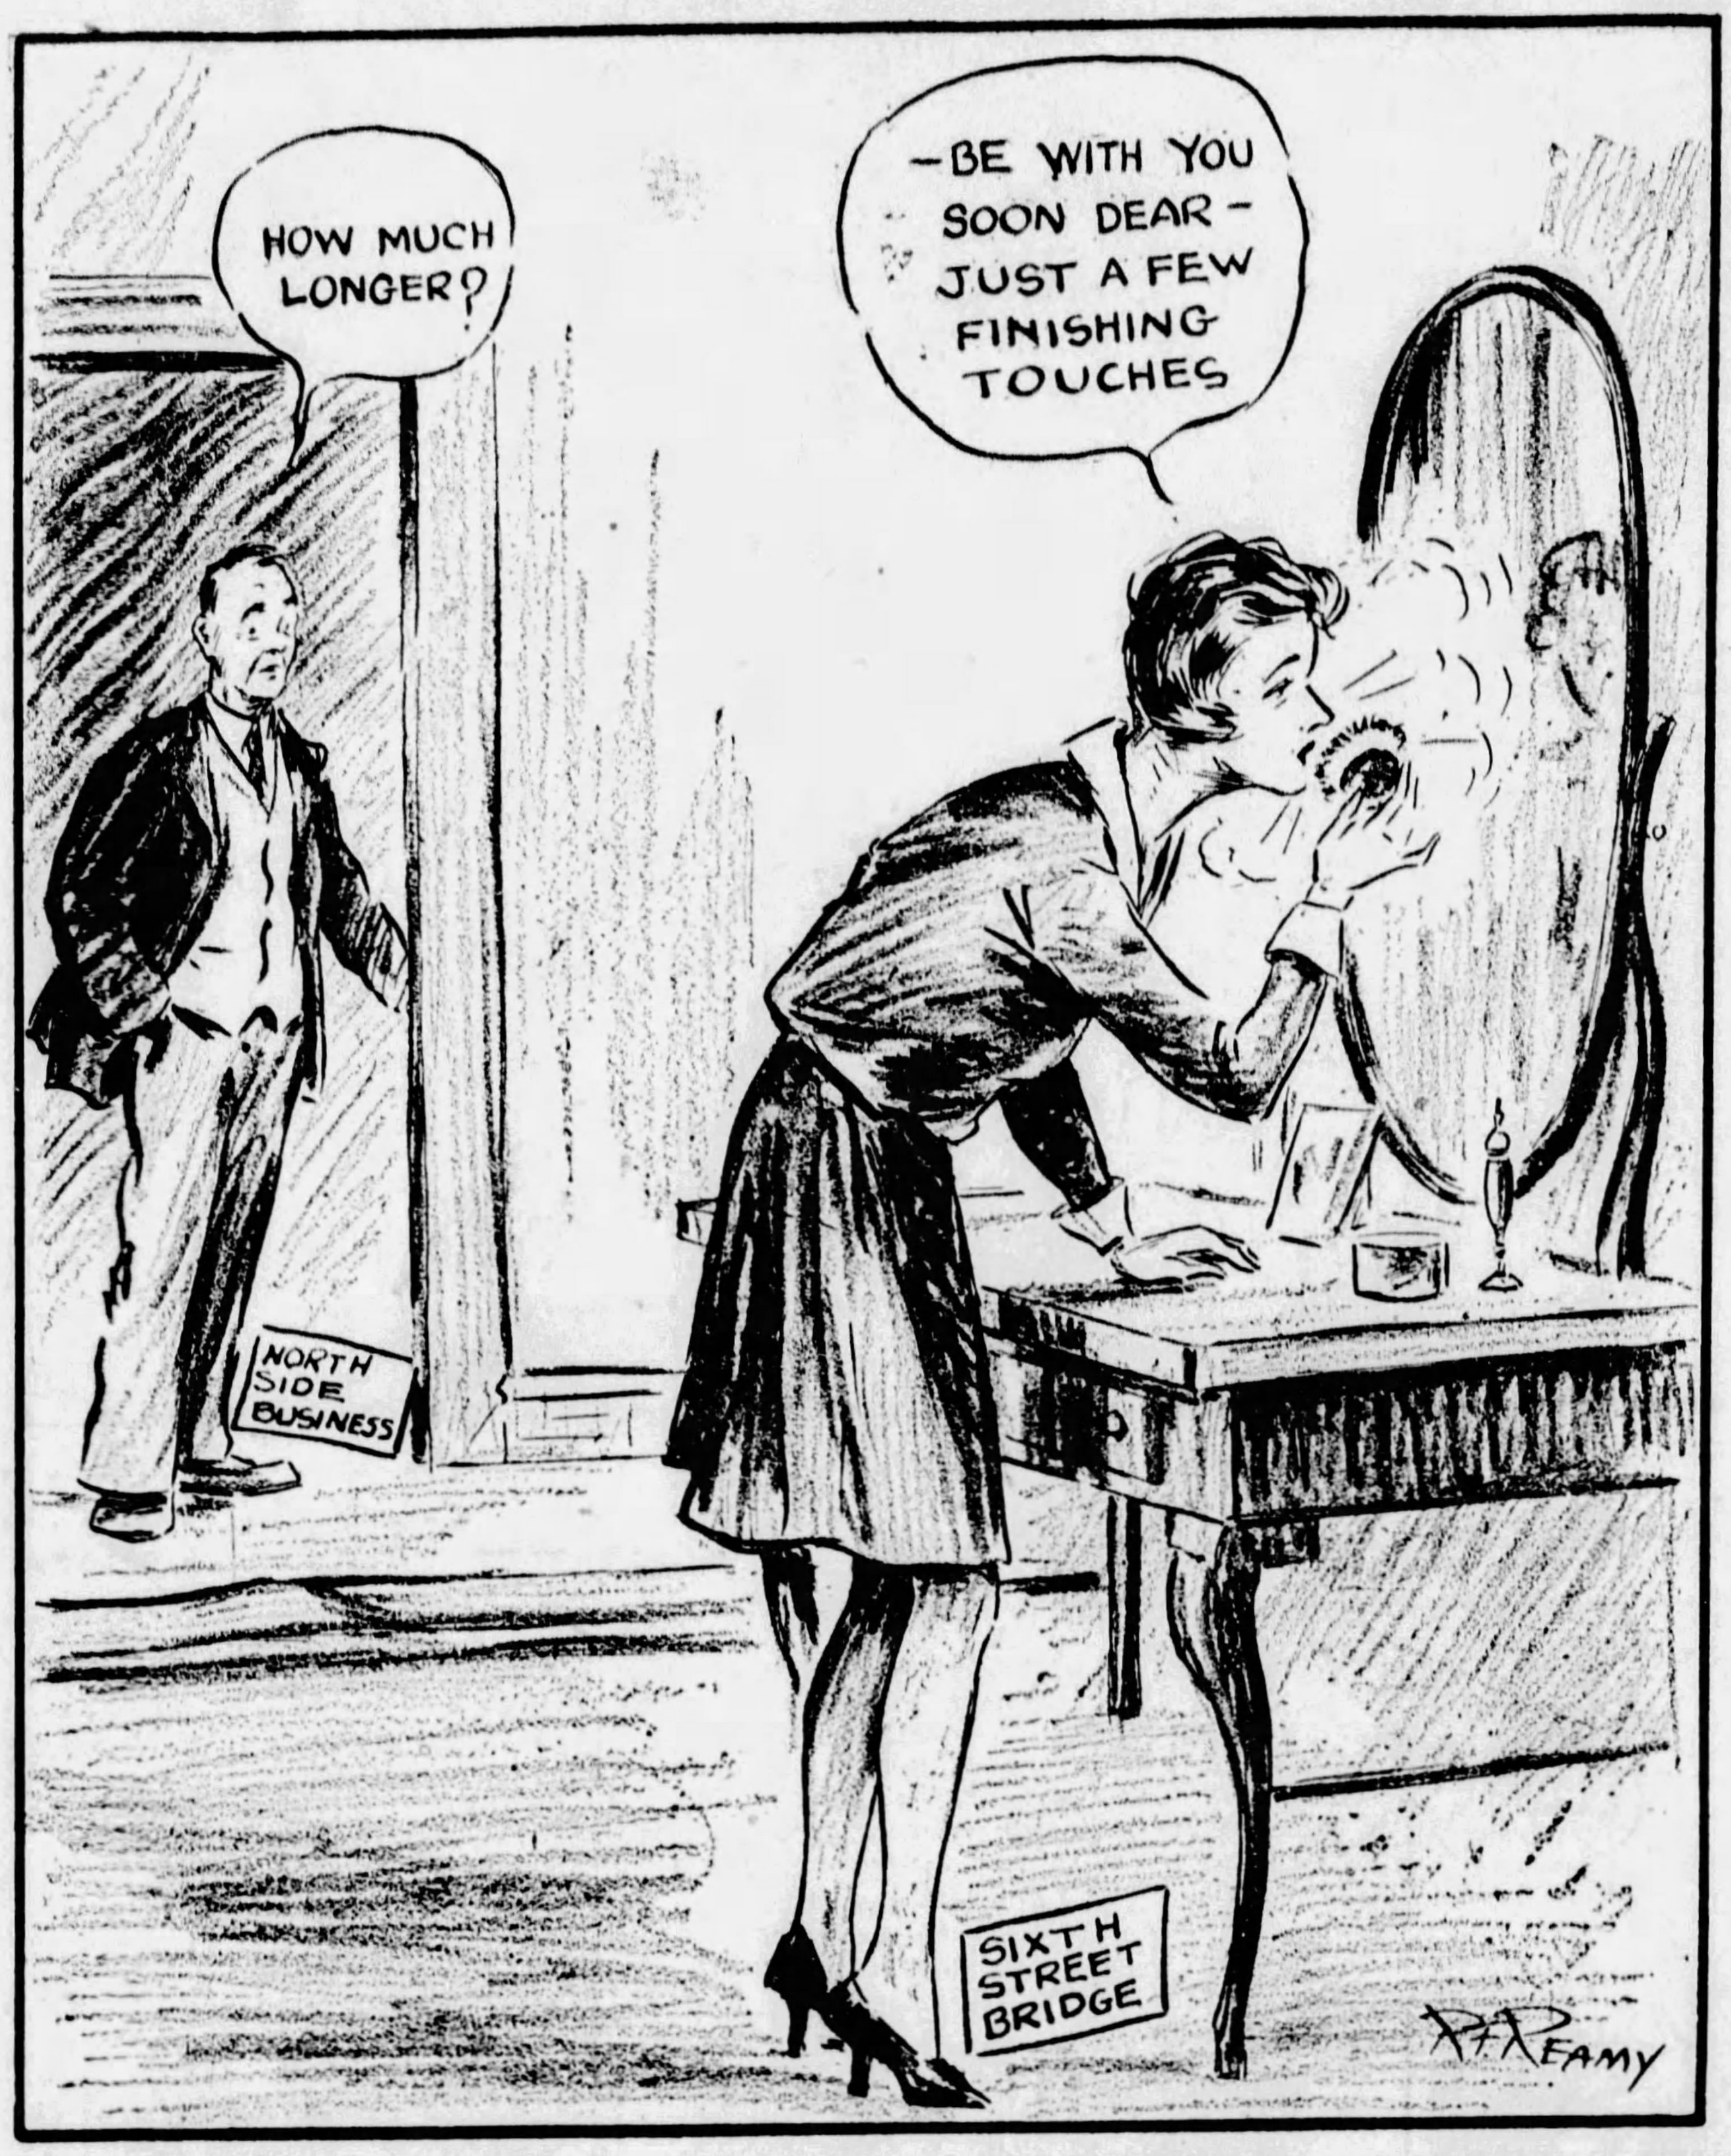
5—Establishment of Pittsburgh metropolitan district.
6—Community Fund for charities.
7—Town Hall, seating at least 15,000.
8—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
9—Development of river transportation.

AT LAST! THE FINISHING TOUCHES



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

In Life's Morning

"TO TRAVEL or to study; that is the question. I am just completing a four-year course in high school, and am undecided as to what road to take—the royal road to romance as Richard Halliburton has put it, or the road to college and higher education. Since I have been a daily reader of your articles I thought maybe you could help me out. Remember I have to work my way through on either road. All my life I have heard my parents tell people I am going to be a lawyer; but I am afraid my drifting mind will never stay in the law books. Just as much as I love travel I love literature. In all my hours after school till the time I fall asleep I devour the delicious book with savor, so that I may be fed with the best minds that ever lived. During my vacations I have traveled as far as the Western coast, by highways and railroads, by hiking and 'bumming.' Every day in my autobiography I write of my best authors, friends, books, thoughts of great men, poems, short stories, etc. Do you think I should be a writer?—Bruno C. Kapustka, Chicago."

Yes, I think you could be a writer, but I cannot tell how successful you would be. You write much better than the average boy emerging from a high school. That you evidently owe to your natural inclination more than to your official teachers. As happens to many bright, capricious minds, you have gained more from desultory reading and observation and from voluntary efforts inspired only by the interests of the moment, than from studies required by school courses and regulations. You belong to a type that is the despair of teachers who follow cut-and-dried methods, but in which more clear-eyed instructors sometimes perceive possibilities that thrill them with glimpses of the future.

I would try to get rid of that "drifting" of the mind you speak of. There, a course in law, or in mathematics (but mathematics would probably be anathema to you) would help you. A discipline which you could administer yourself for yourself would be some definite course of reading, compelling you to follow the subject systematically through many volumes and authorities.

Then turn your "autobiography" into a daily record of progress in your study. Since you are fond of romance and travel, and since neither romance nor travel, in themselves, are good builders of character, you might take for a subject American history—the most romantic of all—which would give consistency and permanent value to your observations in your wanderings from coast to coast. On whatever side of the world you travel study the history and the manners and morals of the people. Let the romance come in of itself, like an atmosphere, like the odors of flowers, it will never do to go about expressly in search of romantic things.

You say that, in any case, whatever your choice of route, you must work your way through. And you will find either way to be costly enough. "Higher education" today is expensive—and sometimes it is not worth what it costs. Primary, and more or less "secondary," education you must have to keep abreast with the times, but you may miss college and university and yet be a leader in your day and generation.

I cannot advise you about details; you must study your own mental character and decide those things for yourself. And remember that the very act of doing so will be an education and a very "high" one. It will cure your mind of drifting, if anything can. Your excessive reading of books will correct itself as you grow; you will begin to concentrate on a few, and you will learn to criticize and judge as well as to admire and imitate.

21 Centuries of Marriage

LIFE is getting longer, and no less happy. Speed is said to be the watchword of our times, but endurance is almost as much so. Out in Jefferson county, Illinois, recently, a picnic given for couples who had celebrated their golden weddings, that is to say, been married for 50 years, was attended by 40 people, 20 husbands, 20 wifes who collectively represented more than 2,100 years of contented matrimony.

Any insurance man will tell you that life insurance rates are steadily verging toward reduction, because most people nowadays live longer than they used to. Nevertheless, 20 couples in the same county, all married over 50 years, is startling.

Give Your Mind a Workout

ARE you allowing yourself to get into the habit of avoiding anything that necessitates hard thinking?

In your selection of reading matter, do you choose only that which entertains?

Do you cast aside books that cannot be read without thought?

If you have followed, even for a short time, your inclination to protect yourself against anything that required the use of brain power, you must have noticed certain results.

One of these is that the more you pursue this course the more difficult it becomes to concentrate on definite study in any subject.

You like to exercise yourself by saying that your daily work tires your head and uses your brain enough to satisfy you.

This may be true in certain pursuits.

But the majority of work-a-day occupations are marked by routine.

The same kind of thought, day after day, is not broadening.

Routine becomes habit, and though in a groove is not the right sort of brain exercise, so seek variety in brain work and study something each day.

The Rhyming Optimist
By ALINE MICHAELS

Prescription

TAKE a bath in sunbeams
(Any hour will do)
Where the wind is kindly
And the sky is blue.

Find some happy comrades,
Birds are sometimes best,
Learn about their secrets,
Watch them build a nest.

Try a little laughter,
More and more each day,
Till earth grows so merry
You are always gay.

Children, too, will help you.
Just to have them near
With their jolly prattle
Makes life still more dear.

Nothing can be better
Than these cures above,
And be sure to take them
With a lot of love.

Isn't It So?

The average girl would rather be in love than be happy.

The thermometer sometimes gets very low, but it is never vulgar.

Few men can keep their good resolutions and a diary at the same time.

A man never cares about meeting his wife's relations—unless they are rich and distinguished.

When a man goes away from home for a change he usually comes back with less than he had when he started.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today
By WILL ROGERS

THE Americans are getting settled down in South America now, where there's a lot of oil prospecting going on. I heard about an American family from Texas that moved in lately in Peru. This guy's name was Jintz, and he sent an agent down ahead of him to buy a big tract of land for to build a big American house on. The agent sent a cablegram like this, "Got thousand acres on plateau for home estate, and got house started. Place is high and healthy, lots of trees and water, and famous old ruins of Incas on west end of it."

The oil man from Texas cabled back: "Fine. Clear out ruins. Nothing but modern American stuff wanted on my estate."

Pointed

THEY were discussing the imperfection of man. The skeptical fellow held that human beings weren't very wonderful after all, and the parson didn't agree with him.

"But surely," protested the scoffer, "you must admit that man is a bungled job? Why, even you, in your work, must have noted many defects in the human organism, and have thought of better physical contrivances."

The parson smiled.

"Yes, I have," he replied. "You see, when I want to shut out anything disagreeable from my sight I can always draw down my eyelids to cover my eyes; but unfortunately I haven't any flaps to my ears."

Her Temper's Outlet

SHE was married to a man whose devotion had never failed for a moment, who never lost his self-control or grumbled whatever happened. Unfortunately, she had a temper like guncotton.

"Tell me, dear," he said, after one outburst on her part, "how was it that I never discovered this unfortunate weakness of yours during our courtship? How did you restrain yourself?"

The poor, volatile woman hesitated before answering such a straightforward question. Then, sobbing bitterly, she laid her fair head on his sturdy shoulder.

"I used to go upstairs," she gasped, "and bite p-p-pieces out of the oak b-b-b-bedstead."

Their Midnight Meeting

MRS. TIMMONS was always thinking she heard burglars. Generally there was no reason for alarm, but one night when Timmons was investigating he found there really was a burglar in the house.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed, taking the surprised intruder by the arm. "Just wait a few minutes, will you?"

"What! While you get the police?" said the other, sarcastically.

"No, I'm not going to do that," said Timmons. "I only want to call my wife. She'll be glad to meet you. She's heard you nearly every night for 20 years."

The Last Resort

AN OLD man who was called into the witness box happened to be rather shortsighted and went up the stairs which led to the bench instead of those that led to the box.

The magistrate, a man with a remarkable sense of humor, smiled.

"Do you want to be a magistrate like me, then?" he asked good-naturedly.

"To be sure, your honor," came the jovial answer. "I'm an old man now an' maybe it's all I'm good for."

THOUGHTS OF THE GREAT—

The wisdom of the wise and the experience of the ages may be preserved by the quotation.—Isaac Disraeli.

Wealth is to be used only as the instrument of action; not as the representative of civil honors and moral excellence.

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

New York Day by Day
by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 14.—The white slave traffic does not flourish in America as it does in Europe, but its poisonous tenacles reach here. New York is still a ''depot'' from which a few girls listed in desultory headlines as ''Missing From Home'' are shipped to European concentration centers.

The East Side has many agencies—known by the misused term of ''cadets''—who are under constant surveillance. So has Chicago. The victims are almost invariably poorly paid girls in factories and shops, betrayed in their despairing search for companionship.

Once they leave American shores, life offers little for which to hope. Their usual destination is Buenos Aires, and there is no record of one ever coming back. It is said there are more than 500 from New York and environs who have disappeared in this manner.

The formula for collecting what the white slavers call "baggage" in New York is simple. Poverty breeds the "baggage.' A young girl, struggling futilely for the bare necessities, is approached by the well-dressed stranger and invited to a dance hall, movie or cheap cabaret.

There is a chivalric attitude, tremendously impressive in a life of drabness. There comes a box of candy, then a bit of wearable finery, and in a few weeks she is visiting the hair dressers, beauty parlors and dressmaking establishments. She is being groomed for hell.

In the first stages of companionship there is rarely love-making. The attitude is paternal, and establishes a confidence. The victim fails to realize she is being baited for the sordid life she is to lead. When she becomes presentable and attractive the trap is sprung.

She is invited abroad as a "secretary." A love of luxury has been implanted, and what appears to be the realization of an impossible dream is never suspected until she is turned over to "Le Milieu" or "The Center" in Paris.

The White Slave King is not entirely a creation of the cheaper melodrama and yellow backs. In Europe, where trafficking in women is regarded in a less hideous light, there are several auctioneers who have attained not only wealth but a certain social prominence. There is one in Paris, generally reputed about the bars to be a leader, who mingles among smart crowds at the Ritz Sunday night dinners, at the opera and race courses. He is a monacled fashion plate and one of the town's heaviest spenders.

A new night haunt is a pastry shop where patrons stand at a marble counter. My selection was one of those spring trigger back-firing chocolate eclaires which sprayed my necktie and vest with a yellow goo just as a beautiful actress tripped in. A pastry parlor is no place for an old fruit, anyway. I am not the type.

But selecting French pastry is swell fun for a guy with no bringing up. You can point without raising a supercilious eyebrow.

A hardened New Yorker rarely looks up from his newspaper at the views of domestic bliss offered from the winding path of the elevated as it coils through tenemented districts. It is not so much a feeling of delicacy as it is he is used to it. But the stranger gazes at the slice of life disclosed by the overhead with the broad sympathy he brings to bear upon life along home town streets on summer evenings when the blinds are up and porches full.

* * *

To carry a gun in New York is a prison offense, yet a police official says there are more carried than in Chicago. "Most men," he declares, "who make a living in strange ways here carry large guns." Mine is not especially large—just sized so as not to destroy the set of my clothes.

The Spring
By DR. FRANK CRANE

I do not know that I ever heard of any heathen people worshiping a spring Why, I do not know. I have read of nymphs and such things haunting springs, but I do not recall any case where a spring was worshiped.

Just why I cannot tell. It seems to me that if I were a heathen man and hunting for something to worship, I should consider a spring very favorably as a good candidate.

To be sure, there is the sun, which is the source of all power, and the mountain which stands for great strength, and other objects of nature that are apparently symbols of the divine, to say nothing of an egg, which perhaps is the most wonderful of all nature, as it contains the secret of growth.

But the spring is so manifestly other worldly. It just comes out of the ground where it has no business and everything about it comes to life.

You see a spring on the hillside gush forth from a fissure in the rock. Weeds and lilies grow in the rivulet that is formed, and even trees spring up about it. Men and animals come to refresh themselves of its waters, it is so manifestly a source of life.

Then, it is eternal, in a way. I remember seeing a spring behind the old castle at Heidelberg. The castle had been destroyed, but the spring was babbling just as fresh as before they began to build the castle.

Some folks are like springs. When they enter the circle everybody picks up. They are like bringers, conversation makers and thought producers. They stimulate all our nerve centers. Why, I do not know. They may not be particularly pretty or shapely or intellectual. They just have something about them that sets people going.

Most of us are dead ones lying around like old slabs of dead earth. One of these spring people comes along and grass and flowers immediately appear, and the desert blooms like a rose.

What is it?

I suppose these people are imbued with a surplus of life.

What we all want is life. It may take a thousand forms and ways of expression, but, substantially, it is all the same.

"Gnaw my withers, rack my bones,
Life, mere life, for all atones."

OH, THESE WOMEN!
By LEOLA ALLARD

LADY ELLESMERE, London society hostess, posted notices forbidding smoking at a party she gave. She was tired of having costly carpets burned and furniture marked by cigarets and cigars.

What a good time must have been had by all!

I myself, personally, rather go to a less elegant place.

An injunction is what a New York woman asks, to keep another woman from going out with her husband. She is suing for a separation, but what matter—she wants the other woman to let him alone.

If love laughs at locksmiths, what a loud guffaw an injunction should get!

Eliza crossing the ice has nothing on the modern woman who tries to cross the cobble-stoned street in these high-spike heels. And then to add to her misery, some he-man always toots his horn for her to hurry along.

A discriminating man in Pasadena, Cal., willed his wife $1,000 and his "friend," another woman, $3,000. He left word that he had no ill feeling against his wife.

Just a fine sense of personal values, maybe.

A boy of 23 in New York, stole a hearse and took some of his girl chums riding. Two of the girls fell out of the back of the hearse and the police officer seeking them, thought something was wrong, and arrested them.

The officer was right in his supposition.

People who ride in hearses don't usually walk home. And falling out the rear end of a hearse certainly was a dead give away. Young people today are so original, bless their hearts.

An officer arrested a young Irish woman "because," he explained in court, "she just goes around hunting someone to start a fight with. She is Irish and she loves a good fight."

It's the exercise that keeps them so pink cheeked and healthy. People that slide over what might be taken for an insult, are usually pale, weak looking folks. One fight a day keeps the doctor away.

Stars and Stripes

In New Haven a circus elephant went crazy and got shot. In some cities an elephant can go crazy and be considered a Grand Old Party.

Tex Rickard says he was broke in 1925. Some fight promoters would gladly pay $40 for ringside seats to see him in that condition now.

The American Language

PROF. WILLIAM A. CRAIGE, the Scotchman who edited the "Oxford" dictionary of the English language, is now engaged upon a work almost equally monumental—the University of Chicago Historical Dictionary of the American Language. The purpose of this dictionary is to record every word and phrase which is known to have had its origin in this country and to trace the history of the use of all such words down to the present day.

Sir William was a scholar long before he was a "knight," and his new honor will not affect his scholarship. The job he is engaged in may outlast him, but it will not outlast the interest of the organization he has built up; and it will be a monument to many an "unknown soldier" of language in the past.
